Nextdoor.com to hold community organizing events

By BENN HODAPP

Residents all over the Sacramento area are getting a glimpse of a revolutionary tool to bring neighborhoods together in the form of a social networking site called Nextdoor.com. The company, which launched its first ever neighborhood site in San Francisco in Oct. 2011, has since spread to all 50 states in the last 22 months.

Nextdoor's website describes it as a way to "quickly get the word out about a break-in, organize Neighborhood Watch groups, track down a trustworthy babysitter, find out who does the best paint job in town, ask for help to keep an eye out for a lost dog, find a new home for an outgrown bike, or finally call that nice man down the street by his first name."

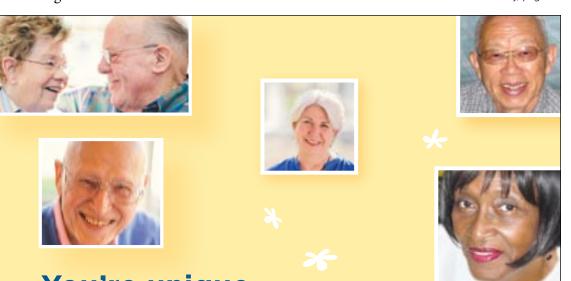

Eight community meetings have been scheduled throughout the Sacramento area to introduce the site and answer any questions residents might have about it. So far there are 182 active Nextdoor neighborhood sites in the Sacramento area, according to Nextdoor's Director of Communications Kelsey Grady.

A July 25th meeting at the Clunie Community Center on Alhambra Blvd. saw roughly 60 residents in attendance to hear speakers from the Sacramento Police Department, councilmember Jay Schenirer and Nextdoor representative Laura Williams. The Sacramento Police Department has partnered with Nextdoor, something that has happened in more than 120 cities nationwide according to Grady.

Williams said in an e-mail that even people who aren't computer-savvy can still use the site thanks to Nextdoor's iPhone app, but even if

Just back from a musical mini-vacation to Portland, Oregon, is our "golden age" neighbor and long-time Arden resident Dorothy McMahon. Reporting that the annual Portland Harbor Music Festival was a "carefree delight," once again this summer Dorothy indulged in her love of Zydeco music, as well as the other forms presented at the festival. Since moving to a different apartment in the Arden area, we haven't seen much of her, and missed the occasional gift of persimmons, pomegranates or oranges which she hung on our front doorknob as the fruits came into season. Dorothy's secret of staying active and strong: frequent swimming outings in her van to various pools in the area. Welcome back, healthy senior lady!

Also back, this time from a fourday motorcycle and camping adventure to Alpine Lake, was our neighbor and friend Dane Johnson. And a great Dane (pardon the pun) he is-a big-hearted, generous fellow--a gentleman Harley-Davidson rider whose

As it so happened, his winter weight-loss program had made him appear to be swimming in tropical flowers. The shirts, nearly cleaned and pressed, fit perfectly, XXL, and really elevated our mood...

Dane, a regular at the morning kaffeeklatsch ritual at Peet's in Lyon Village, had a very different report to make of his trip. Besides dealing with the pesky flies and mosquitoes, he described an incident of--what shall we call it--territorial tension? As he was just getting settled in his campsite, a "gentleman" appeared from out of the woods and suggested he leave.

"I got six families coming here and I want you to go," boldly declared the swarthy stranger.

When Dane refused, the fellow left and came back with a deer-hunting arrowhead in his hand, pointed menacinglv at our friend. Still he refused, "standing his ground," as it were. On the edge of our seat, we asked what happened next, expecting some story of rough play. But no, our buddy matter-of-factly reported, the "gentleman" left and didn't return.

"He probably just found another campsite," said Dane, dryly.

"Chalk one up for steel nerves," we volunteered.

Solar Cookers International to hold annual gathering Carmichael resident discusses work with the nonprofit and passion for energy conservation

By MONICA STARK

Angelina Seda is 87 years old and lives in Kenya. Eight of her nine chil-dren have died, one is bedridden and she is raising an orphan grandchild with no money and no income. But thanks to local relief efforts from Solar Cookers International, Seda says she can eat hot food now and her life has improved for the better.

Headquartered in Sacramento, SCI facilitates humanitarian and environmentally focused partnerships around the world through a database of connections. As an umbrella organization to numerous groups that try to spread solar cooking worldwide, SCI helps facilitate partnerships.

As in Seda's case and that of other women around the world, solar cooking is about women's issues. If a woman doesn't have to spend hours a day walking to collect firewood, she could use that time growing crops for her family, or spending time with her kids, visiting her relatives or starting a business, Solar Cookers International Executive Director Julie Greene, said during an interview in the backyard of her Sacramento home.

Greene's advocacy with solar cookers began after she read a Parade article about SCI's involvement with a means she's safe," Greene said. Jewish World Watch refugee camp. The inspiring article led her to buy one of the low-end SCI solar cookers, like learning more about the organization made SCI to become her favorite nonprofit for many years. Greene loves her job because she feels like what she does matters. "I am lucky because I get to talk to people directly. John said to me (he's our partner in Kenya), he said for you, in the States, it's for emergencies only but for us, it's a matter of life and death. I think of that almost every day," Greene said.

be enough knowledge, enough mate-rials," she said. "And in places where there are no stores, people are always looking for cookers that could be made of local materials such as cardboard and foil," Greene said.

The array of issues solar cooking impacts spans the gamut of women's, health, poverty and the environment.

Women's issues

Besides the mere time savings a wom-an has for other things when cooking with the sun, their own personal safety is guarded, explained Greene. "Women who are in refugee camps

Similarly, for those who live in the desert and rely on finding twigs for firewood, having thousands of refugees from the camp collecting the twigs that the local people cannot even find, this causes a lot of tension.

The event will also feature Julie Greene and Allart Ligtenberg, inventors of Trekkers' Cooker backpack used at the summit of Mt. Everest - 8 p.m.

Local novice

She remembered watching a wacky morning show years ago where they would cook turkeys in cars. "They actually did it in an old Cadillac. That sucker cooked! It's so hot out there ... I don't know why it's taken so long to get this together," she says. But on a hot July day, she put out two mason jars filled with half a russet potato each on her car's dashboard between a reflective car sunshade and the window. She put the thermometer in the jar. Before she closed the door, the thermometer read between 70-75 degrees Fahrenheit. Within a few minutes after shutting the door, it read 100. A few hours later, she went out to check on the progress. The heat was holding steady at 175 degrees no matter how hot it got outside. "The potato was still cooking!" she said.

can be an issue, she said. Sometimes when cooking vegetables in a solar cooker, she has noticed the flavor change. "It will dry out and taste weird," she said. But when cooking chili, that's something that needs to cook for a long time. "It could sit there and simmer all day ... It's hard to boil a large pot of water. You can combat that by separating the beans into multiple jars to help get things moving and presoaking the

For the interested, Hess recommends beginners purchase a solar cooking cookbook. "Someone has done all the trial and error!"

that just sounds nasty."

So Hess went rogue and started making her own personal cookbook. Here are some of her recipes:

Solar Chili 1 140z can diced tomatoes 2 cans water 1 medium bell pepper cut into 1/2 inch cubes 1/2 cup corn (optional) 2 tsp salt 1/4 cup chili powder 1 Tbs cumin 2 tsp coriander 1 tsp red pepper flakes 1 tsp oregano 1/2 tsp cayenne pepper

Solar advice from Sacramento novice and experts from SCI

Sacramento resident Ilsa Hess has been solar cooking on and off for 20 years. Using a variety of cookers, including the dashboard of her VW Beetle, she's tried making everything from cornbread to muffins, steamed vegetables, and chili.

Talk about free energy! Hess said out of all the cookers she has tried, her favorite remains the fold-up Cook-it, which you can get through Solar Cookers International. A friend of hers let her borrow a big box cooker. "I tried to 1 tsp onion powder cook muffins, but they released a lot of moisture. I thought it would be the god of all cooking gods. But it's so heavy and I was blowing my back out. For what it's doing, it's not that awesome."

With the Cook-it, she has found that if it's hot enough outside, by noon her food can be all done. While SCI recommends black enamel pans, Hess said the glass jars work well for her because she can actually see when something is done.

Solar cooking definitely has a learning curve. Different factors like the time of day and the wind

If you are interested in trying solar cooking for the first time yourself, you may be wondering whether it is best to build your own solar cooker, or to buy a finished solar cooker commercially. Take a look at how solar cookers work to help understand the principles of solar cooking. Building your own solar cooker can be fairly easy and inexpensive way to go. Various types of solar cookers that are available to build are listed at build a solar cooker off the website, <www.solarcookers.org>. I've been checking the temp and it's staying at a solid 175 even with the reflectors ing temperature if the sun is occasionally blocked by clouds, but most solar cooks seem to use the enamel pots. Because dark cooking pots work the best in solar cookers, it is important to remember to use a nontoxic paint for the exterior cook pot

Happy 75th Anniversary Aubrey and Lucile Glahn

August 6 marked the 75th wedding anniversary of Aubrey & Lu-cile Glahn. "Aub" & "Cile" met at a baseball game in 1935 in Ft. Collins, CO.

Aub would often walk across town with his accordion to serenade Cile. With a few family members and a couple of friends present, they were married on August 6, 1938 on Aub's 21st birthday. The church parsonage was quarantined because the pastor's children were ill, and so they were married in the church. Following the ceremony they went on to a dance. Aub had his own dance band and was playing for a dance that evening. They didn't tell anyone they had just been married because in those days people often chivareed a newly married couple. Lucile danced with others as Aub stage. She was often asked why she was so "gussied" up for the evening.

Fresh Market fills in the old Borders on Fair Oaks

The Fresh Market, a 30-year-old North Carolina-based specialty grocery retailer, will be filling in the old Borders on Fair Oaks Boulevard by fall. The company launched its West Coast expansion in the Sacramento area in October 2012, with the opening of its store in the Rocky Ridge Town Center at 2030 Douglas Boulevard in Roseville.

The company hosted two interview days in Sacramento on Aug. 6-7 at the Courtyard Sacramento, Cal Expo Center.

"We have enjoyed a warm welcome in Roseville, where we opened our first California store this past fall," said Randy Kelley, senior vice president of real estate and development for The Fresh Market."We are excited about our continued expansion in California, and in the greater Sacramento area in particular, and we look forward to providing customers in the Fair Oaks and Elk Grove communities with the same quality products and excellent customer service that our shoppers experience in other markets."

The company has plans for continued expansion across the U.S., including several California sites currently in development in Palo Alto, Santa Barbara and Laguna Hills.

Founded in 1982, The Fresh Market, Inc. (NASDAQ: TFM) is a specialty grocery retailer focused on providing high-quality products in a unique and inviting atmosphere with a high level of customer service. The company currently operates 129 stores in 25 states, primarily located in the Southeast, Midwest, Mid-Atlantic, Northeast and West Coast, with plans for continued expansion throughout the country. The Fresh Market is an equal opportunity employer. For more information, please visit www.thefreshmarket.com.

the site they can still benefit. And for elder folks who maybe don't have a computer or a cell phone?

"Nextdoor is a great way to organize a group of neighbors to visit/check up on the elderly in their community," Williams said.

at a website as just a roadblock keeping people from conversing face-to-face in an ever-growing digital climate. Williams said that the company works to ensure that the opposite is true.

"I describe Nextdoor as the ice breaker in getting to know your neighbors. Today it can be uncomfortable (if not downright impossible) to meet your neighbors face-to-face. We drive into our garages and lock all of our gates, fences and doors, which makes it difficult to even knock on the door to allows you to introduce yourting. You can see your neighlittle bit about them before ac-
