Carmichael Rotary gears up for annual crab feed

Every year, the Rotary Club of Carmichael participates in a number of projects for people in need. Every December, the club provides nearly a week's worth of food – and a big turkey for Christmas dinner to more than 100 families within the San Juan School District. Additionally, thousands of dollars in scholarships were raised for Del Campo high school students. Every October, they feed more than 500 Special Olympic athletes and coaches during the Northern California tournament. As students graduate from high school, the club provides thousands of dollars in scholarships. Every June, the club generates more than $25,000 for Easter Seals through a golf tournament at Ancil Hoffman. The list goes on and on.

How does the club do that? The biggest fundraiser of the year is coming up and this one event generates nearly 75 percent of the necessary funding. On Saturday, Feb. 7, the Rotary will hold its annual crab feed fundraiser with cocktails at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. at La Sierra Community Center. All are invited to come celebrate, eat, drink, and donate to the club's goals along with the music of the Sundance Kid, who will spin the great songs from the past and some new dance tunes. These are only a few of the things that Rotary does. The price is $50 per person. For tickets, contact V. Iosso @vamaio@att.net. For donations for the raffle or live auction items, contact D. Thorman at dthorman@att.net.

We invite you to celebrate life ... at Eskaton Village Carmichael. If you are ready for more freedom, but want more than a month-to-month rental ... If you want spacious apartment or cottage living and the assurance of staying in your community should your health needs change ... If you want luxury, comfort and service in a gated retirement community ... Come tour Eskaton Village Carmichael. Discover the choices.

World renowned lama to speak on happiness and enlightenment

Jhado Rinpoche, one of the rising stars of Tibetan Buddhism, will speak on the steps to happiness and enlightenment Saturday, Jan. 9, 2015, 7 p.m., at the Kim Quang Temple on Alta Arden Expressway.

Born in 1954 to a nomadic family in Tibet, Jhado Rinpoche was recognized as the incarnation of the abbott of Jhado Monastery at age three.

After fleeing Tibet in 1959, Rinpoche spent several years studying in India.

In 1964, he took vows as a monk from His Holiness the Dalai Lama and was fully ordained in 1973.

For more than a decade, Rinpoche served as a teacher and abbott of the Dalai Lama's private monastery, Namgyal.

He currently is working with the International Kalachakra Network, a project of the Dalai Lama.

Rinpoche will be speaking on Lam Rim, the stages of the path to happiness and enlightenment.

If you go:

- Who: Jhado Rinpoche, former abbott of Dalai Lama's private monastery; Sacramento-based Buddhist nonprofit Lion's Road Dharma Center; and local Mongolian Buddhist temple Zanabazar Dharma Center.
- What: Rinpoche will be giving a talk on Lam Rim, the stages of the path to happiness and enlightenment.

Where: Kim Quang Temple, 3119 Alta Arden Expressway

When: Saturday, Jan. 9, 2015, 7 p.m.

Why: Jhado Rinpoche is one of the most highly esteemed lamas in Tibetan Buddhism. Renowned for his keen intelligence and dynamic teaching style, Rinpoche knows how to engage Western students in ways that are personally relevant to their lives.

Cost: Free, though donations are welcome. For more information, go to www.lionsroardharmacenter.org.

Can Horsepower and Slow Food Supercharge The Boulevard?

By ANTHONY CATAFI

Just last week, Dan and I met with a contractor who expressed his frustration that many of his tools had been stolen from a work site the week prior. Dan jokingly replied, "It wasn't on Del Paso Blvd. was it?" I instantly understood his quip as we had just spoken earlier about how so many people in Sacramento are reluctant to put negative perceptions and the past of The Boulevard to rest. In reality, positive energy is beginning to flow up and down this forgotten landscape. In particular, a humble little farmers market held every Saturday morning at 1409 Del Paso Blvd.

What was just a vision for over 10 years, The Arden Garden Market (AGM) is now open and slowly making progress. Against all odds, the market's founder and visionary, Dan Friedlander, has been determined to make this community market a reality. Future plans include 7-day a week permanent retail of produce, meat, cheese, bread, and other goods. The proposed site also hosts a produce distribution hub, community garden, ethnic center, and room for 200 vendors. With that in mind, my focus has been building the farmers market and creating community events that give our guests a glimpse of that future.

Growing up, I had always envisioned myself in a position to make a difference. Serving people came naturally to me as my family hosted major holidays and entertained frequently. After seven years and two degrees at San Jose State University, I still hadn't found my way. I decided to feed my hospitality bug and flew to New York to attend The Culinary Institute of America. While I quick-ly realized the professional kitchen was not for me, my sense of fulfillment in serving others took me to fast casual restaurants. The work was fun for a while but it was work. In August of this year, Dan and I were introduced and I took a leap of faith naive of the challenges ahead. From seasons changing, to reluctant farmers, to not having a budget for marketing, I found myself forced to think out of the box.

This past September I was alone in the dark in my living room at 3 a.m. when "Fast Cars, Slow Food" came to me. My hands rose in the air the way they did when San Francisco took the World Series. And while hot rods and fresh produce are not your typical peas and carrots combination, perhaps it just might work to get people out to The Boulevard. The event featured our Certified Farmers Market, our Third Saturday's Vintage Market, food, live music, and of course cool cars.

While the event brought hundreds to The Boulevard, an average market day is much quieter and foot traffic is light. Some question the markets sustainability given its loca-tion, and high saturation of lower income households. To those I say great things don't come easy. In addition to providing North Sacramento residents with much needed access to fresh fruits and vegetables, this market may just be the next piece of the puzzle in bringing Del Paso Blvd. back to its feet.

Anthony Catafi is the market manager for the Arden Garden Market and will be writing a monthly column on the market.

IF YOU GO:

Arden Garden Market is a weekly market for 9 to 1 .m. at 1409 Del Paso Blvd. This Saturday, Dec. 13, there will be a special Christmas-themed market with a breakfast with Santa. Sponsored by the Del Paso Boulevard Partnership and Bergstrom Realty, the event is a fundraiser for volunteer firefighters. Additionally at ther market, there will be arts and crafts for children free of charge. The breakast is $7 is is prepared by the vol-unteer firefighters. For more information, check out Arden Garden Market on Facebook.

Baby Basket Drive to benefit Arden woman and other new moms

By KRISTIN THEBAUD

Everything seemed to be working in Christine Sy's life – she was 29, newly married, working, and living in Arden Arcade. But in July, she was shocked by those two lines on the pregnancy test that meant her life would unexpectedly change. And she had no health insurance.

As she drove down the street in a frightened daze, she passed the Sacramento Life Center's Mobile Medical Clinic in the Leatherby's Family Creamery parking lot. And when she walked in the door, once again her life unexpectedly changed – this time with a flood of relief over her tense body.

"I couldn't believe how excited they were to see me," Sy said. "It wasn't like a doctor's office. They wanted to sit and chat with me. They didn't judge me for not having insurance."

Not only did they confirm Sy's pregnancy, they connected her to Health Care for Women, which gave her presumptive MediCal while the Sacramento Life Center helped her apply.

The Sacramento Life Center provided her with a free ultrasound and free prenatal vitamins. And they gave her the good news that she and her husband were expecting the boy they had begun to hope for, along with a free video of the ultrasound. "They helped me realize there's so much joy in bringing a life into the world," Sy said. "We got so excited and immediately started making lifestyle changes in preparation to be parents."

But she teared up when she learned that she would be given a Baby Basket when Bennett River Sy arrives in early April. Filled with formula, diapers, starter clothes, pacifiers and more, Baby Baskets are given to every pregnant patient at the Sacramento Life Center when she gives birth.

As local women and teens spend the holidays preparing to become new moms in the coming year, the Sacramento Life Center is holding a Baby Basket Drive through Dec. 31 so it can continue to provide a basket of needed items to every patient who gives birth in 2015. Donations can be made online at www.saclife.org. Gifts can be made in any increment, but a donation of $50 buys one basket.

"Our patients may come in for a pregnancy test, but they leave with a strong support system and resources," said Marie Leatherby, executive director. "We want to encourage women and teen girls and their partners that they are capable of caring for a child, and we understand the hurdles that they often face – sometimes as simple as wondering if they will be able to afford diapers. These Baby Baskets give new moms a boost of confidence and needed supplies."

The Sacramento Life Center's mission is to offer compassion, support, resources and free medical care to women and couples facing an unplanned or unsupported pregnancy. The center's licensed Sac Valley Pregnancy Clinic includes a primary clinic and two mobile clinics, all providing free services including pregnancy tests, STD tests, ultrasounds, counseling for men and women, education and resource referrals. The Sacramento Life Center also offers a school-based teen education program, a 24-hour hotline and a program for women seeking support after having an abortion.

"I've always dreamed of being a mom," Sy said. "I just thought it wasn't the right time. I'm in such a positive place in my life now. I feel like the Sacramento Life Center got me in that place. It's because of them that I'm so happy and ready to be a mom. If I have anything to tell other women, it's don't be scared. This will motivate you to be the person you wanted to be. You'll be more courageous."

Sacramento's first hospice house to be operated on a sliding scale

By MONICA STARK editor@valcomnews.com

Sacramento's first hospice house will break ground on Thursday, Jan. 8 in the Walnut Avenue area. Operated by Advanced Home Health and Hospice, the $2.9 million, 7,000-square-foot facility is planned to feature 12 beds and will be on a sliding scale.

No one will be turned away for lack of funds.

Marie Copher has worked as a hospice social worker for five years and prior to that, as an adult protective services social worker. She said she has seen first-hand the need for a facility that can accommodate people who are facing the end of their journey in life in a place that "offers safety, an appropriate high level of care, warmth and respect."

"There are many people who continue to fall through the cracks and do not have the healthcare and/or the support they need to address their medical, physical, emotional and spiritual needs during this time in their lives. Our hospice house will provide everyone who resides in it, all those things, plus a beautiful setting to call their home during the last moments in life."

Advanced Home Health and Hospice owners, Dr. James Sehr and Angela Allen-Sehr, a registered nurse, have donated their 2.5-acre lot as it has been a longtime dream of theirs to offer this service to hospice patients. Additionally, James and Angela will be donating about 99 percent of the construction costs.

In an interview with Valley Community Newspapers, Marie said if all goes as planned, the facility will open with the first six bedrooms by next fall. Additionally, the SEHR-ALLEN CHARITABLE FOUNDATION first phase will include about 20 clinical/care rotating personnel and approximately 20 peripheral personnel (housekeeping, grounds maintenance, marketing, etc.). The second phase, which is set to include six additional beds will be serviced by staff that will be added as determined at that time. "Often times the people that will need the help are people who are coming from hospitals or skilled nursing facilities where there are social workers or case managers where their job is to find a home for this person. There are certain populations that get lost in the shuffle. Lately I've gone to various places to let people know this is coming up (and to describe) what it will look like."

Dr. James Sehr, a retired orthopedic surgeon; and Angela Allen-Sehr, a registered nurse, is the heart of advanced home and hospice branch of the multifaceted business.

"She and her husband owned the land, (the hospice house) just was something they had been talking about

"The land was vacant and (Angela's) a huge animal lover. She's had goats and would just spend some time out there and she decided that would be the perfect place for the hospice house. They had already drawn up plans for the home. We have a contractor ready to go."

As a hospice and palliative care specialist, Marie often acts as the face of the Sehr-

Allen Charitable Foundation, which is the back-bone for this project. She provides trainings for professionals. She talks with patients and families.

For me, everything hospice is about education and that means education for everybody, the young and old, that they know about death and dying. It could be a very special gift to be allowed to be a part of the process at the end of someone's journey. It's truly an honor and a gift," she said.

The hospice house will benefit those who are coming from hospitals or skilled nursing facilities where there are social workers or case managers who tell them or their loved ones to find a home. But, as an expert in her field, Marie knows there are certain populations that get lost in the shuffle.

"The hospice house, therefore will accept patients from any hospice in Sacramento that needs to place a hospice patient. There's a huge need for that. There are times people who don't meet medicare (qualifications)," she said.

"All the medications, all the equipment, all the staff that comes out - medicare pays it. (Veterans Administration) also pays for veterans, so veterans will come in and they can choose to use medicare or their VA benefits. But if you don't qualify for medicare (or VA benefits), you have your private insurance pay. Some have benefits for hospice, some don't. They end up paying out of pocket. So, this house will work with people on a sliding scale. Angela's words are 'no one will be turned away.' There are plenty of people who fall through the cracks. Often people who are homeless have nowhere to go.

"They have no family, no one. So we're left with (the question), What do we do with this patient? If this person doesn't have money, where do they go? It's a huge issue. There are a lot of families that don't want to die in their own homes."

Marie said she's had patients tell her they don't want to die at home because they don't want their loved ones to remember their home that way. "This is something that quite honestly (happens frequently). We will need more than one hospice house. But James and Angela said, 'Let's do this."

According to Marie, the hospice home will employ staff who are able to dispense the medications that the patients need, which is a quality that is not found in all end of life facilities. Additionally, the home will have a special focus on veterans, which is something near and dear to Angela's heart. She was born in China and she came to the United States, and she is a very proud citizen of the United States. So, she gives a lot of credit to veterans, as we all should, for her freedoms and her success. So, there's a large focus on veterans (at the hospice house)."

That said, Marie explained the importance of the training the staff will have in regard to end-of-life care for veterans. "They have special issues at the end of their lives. They have had to see and do things we have not. There are spiritual issues that need to be addressed. Many times, if there is PTSD or Alzheimer's, there could be issues of combativeness so our staff would be able to treat and respond to these behaviors and treat (them)."

In addition to the 12 bedrooms, the home will include various family meeting rooms. Each bedroom will have a large French door that will lead out into the garden and the property grounds. The ability for each resident to have private outdoor access is another highlight Marie stressed in the interview with this publication. "A lot of times when they are facing end of life facilities, they don't get to go outside. Not only is that such an awesome benefit to have, it is also a safety issue because we can then get hospital beds in and out of the building fast. For a patient that is bedridden, we can push the bed out to the outdoors so they can enjoy the outdoors. Also, this house will accept patients' pets so they can have their loved ones at the end."

Should the need arise that no friends or family are there to accept the pets, the hospice house staff will adopt the pets, as there are plans to have a pet sanctuary on site.

FUNIERAI

Did you know? Questions arise surrounding death and dying

By LISA WEST lisaw@eastlawn.com

Did you know that when someone passes away there are nearly 100 decisions that must be made within the first 48 hours? Do you want burial, cremation or entombment? To you want a traditional church funeral service or life tribute celebration? How many death certificates do you need? And did you know that if you do not have any advance funeral arrangements in place, your next of kin must take the responsibility to make all of these decisions on your behalf?

Not only will it be difficult for these decisions to be made during the grieving process, they simply may not know what you wanted. If your next of kin are your children, many funeral homes ask that they ALL agree before certain services such as cremation are carried out. This can be especially difficult if all of your children live in various parts of the country or are not easily accessible, such as those serving in the military.

If you have always taken care of your family, nurtured them, provided for their needs, put them through college, doesn't it seem appropriate that you would take care of this important "life and death" issue so they don't have to?

Knowing that every person will eventually pass away, why do you think so many people put this off, sometimes until it is too late? After all, you've planned for your career and retirement, who better to plan for the inevitable?

There are many reasons people put it off' - sometimes we just don't want to believe we are ever going to die. Another reason is cost. People are often under the misconception it is just not affordable when often the opposite is true. What maybe unaffordable is if your family are left to pay the bill. But, the cost savings can be enormous if you pre-plan and if you pre-arrange, you can pay over time.

Josh Tuttle, Funeral Director and General Manager of East Lawn Mortuary and Sierra Hills Memori-al Park said this, "When I meet with people and they see the numerous payment options we offer, they are surprised at how affordable our plans are. After all, we own the property, so we regularly offer 48 to 72 months at zero interest for most gravesites, crypts, niches and cremation gardens." Tuttle continued, "But when people put off the decision, it is a far greater burden to have to come up with the full amount at the time of need."

Tuttle went on to explain that each month he conducts a free luncheon seminar which includes a short presentation and key consumer advice on advance funeral planning. "Our goal is to educate people in a no pressure atmosphere so they can be better equipped to put the plans in place that they want. Being able to give your family some direction about what your preferences are is truly a gift to them," concluded Tuttle.

Airport was once proposed for Fulton Avenue, Cottage Way site

By LANCE ARMSTRONG Lance@valcomnews.com

It may be difficult for many people today to imagine, but an airport for small planes was once envisioned for a 100-acre site east of Fulton Avenue, between Cottage Way and El Camino Avenue.

The post-World War II, north area airport plans included a 2,000-foot runway, an 800-foot runway, hangars and other structures.

According to a brief announcement in the Nov. 28, 1945 edition of The Sacramento Bee, a permit was granted for the establishment of the airport by the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors.

It was also mentioned that the permit was "subject to approval of the site by the Civil Aeronautics Authority," which was based in Santa Monica. That approval process was based on the proposed air landing site's size, location, physical characteristics and specific uses.

On the evening of Dec. 10, 1945, while that permit was pending with the CAA and the California State Aviation Project Committee was holding a session at the Hotel Senator at 1125 L St., a public meeting about the possibility of establishing an airport in the Arden area was held at Arden School at 3500 Arden Way.

In attendance at the meeting was North Sacramento resident James K. Bullock, an attorney who spoke against the project, claiming that the construction of an airport at the Fulton Avenue site would cause a decrease in property values in that area. He cited possible falling planes and aircraft noise as reasons for opposing the building of an aviation facility at that location.

During the same meeting, a vote was held in which a majority of Arden area residents opposed the plans for the establishment of the airport.

The final vote tally, which was 42 to 21, was announced by Arden District Improvement Club President Steve Williams and eventually sent to the CAA.

Only a day after the meeting at Arden School, Sacramento hosted the Western Aviation Conference at the Hotel Senator. At that event, Gov. Earl Warren gave a speech entitled, "What Aviation Means to the West."

Sacramento had previously hosted the conference on one other occasion, from Sept. 23 to 25, 1937.

On Dec. 15, 1945, The Bee reported a story out of the nation's capital that legislation was pending before Congress on a $1 billion national airport program, which included $24 million that would be contributed toward the construction and improvements of airports in California.

Paul Blanco's Good Car Co. at 2200 Fulton Ave. is among the businesses that sit on a site that was once proposed for a small plane airport, complete with two runways, hangars and other structures.

Although local and state governments would be required to match federal funding, it was expected that California would need to contribute a little more than half of the final cost – an estimated $26 million.

The overall program featured a plan for 3,000 new airports and improvements to 1,600 existing airports.

According to the article, legislation on the long range project had already been passed "in different forms" by the Senate and the House of Representatives, and conference committees were "ironing out the differences" on various topics, including specific details about the application of funds and the speed in which the program would move forward.

Another aviation related article accompanied the article regarding the pending national airport program. The other article presented details about local plans for landing fields, and specifically mentioned the proposed airport east of Fulton Avenue.

It was also noted in the article that request had been made for an airport in the Colonial Acres area and a small, seaplane-type landing area at Bryte Bend on the Sacramento River.

An example of the drive to increase postwar civilian flying in Sacramento County was the county's effort at that time to create a master plan showing airport locations and places where other airports could be built without traffic hazards. The purpose of having that master plan was to aid future planning commission decisions pertaining to landing field applications.

The areas recognized on the map as having been determined to be fitting locations for then future airports were Carmichael, Fair Oaks, Elk Grove, Franklin, Galt, Freeport, Glannvale, Twin Cities, Elverta, Elkhorn, Manlove, Swanston and the district adjacent to the Sacramento Signal Depot (later known as the Sacramento Army Depot).

Also shown on the map were the then-existing airports at Mather Field, McClellan Field and Municipal Airport (today's Executive Airport), as well as landing fields in Florin, Natomas and Rio Linda.

North Sacramento resident Robert O. Bowman expressed his views regarding the Fulton Avenue airport plan in a letter to the editor that was published in The Bee on Dec. 18, 1945. In commenting about the aforementioned majority vote against having an airport constructed at Fulton Avenue and Cottage Way, Bowman wrote: "Apparently, the Arden-Arcade folks don't believe in postwar planning or employment."

Bowman then quoted a few words from the Nov. 15, 1945 issue of the CAA bulletin, as follows: "A total of 901,300 jobs in or created by aviation is predicted for 1955. This one business can provide about 6 per cent (sic) of all the new jobs required to achieve substantially full employment.

"In 1955, there will be 2,800,000 families who can afford both an airplane and an automobile."

On Jan. 28, 1946, The Bee reported that sponsors of the Arden area airport had requested that the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors make an early ruling regarding their county permit application for the airport.

The board responded by ordering a Jan. 30, 1946 hearing on the matter.

It was mentioned in the Jan. 28, 1946 article that Bullock had told the board that he was representing 90 Arden-Arcade residents who were opponents of the airport projects.

Those residents' dream of not having an airport constructed in the area came true, as the project was eventually abandoned.

Today, the site is part of the well-known Fulton Avenue auto row, as well as several different types of businesses and residential housing.

Missing Carmichael teen

The San Juan Unified and Rio Americano High School communities are asking for the public's help in locating a freshman who has not been seen since Monday morning.

Nicholas Sheehy, 15, was last seen near his Carmichael home about 7:15 a.m. Monday. He never arrived at school, and was reported missing to the Sacramento County Sheriff's Department on Monday evening.

Nicholas' family members say this behavior is uncharacteristic, and they are extremely concerned about his safety and wellbeing. The Sheriff's Department has classified him as being at-risk.

Nicholas is 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 200 pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes.

Anyone with information about Nicholas' whereabouts is asked to call the Sheriff's Department at (916) 874-5115.

Bella Vista teacher named National Language Teacher of the Year

Nicole Naditz, a French language teacher at Bella Vista High School, has been named National Teacher of the Year.

Naditz was selected by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages and was presented with her award during an annual convention in San Antonio, Texas.

'I congratulate Nicole for receiving this high honor,' said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson. 'As an outstanding language teacher, she is giving her students a skill that will increase their understanding of other cultures and help them succeed in our increasingly global economy.'

Anyone wishing to join us in celebrating Naditz's accomplishments may attend a reception on Thursday, Dec. 4 at 2:30 p.m. in the Bella Vista library.

Photos by TANJA MECEY Special to the Arden-Carmichael News

The Deterding Elementary School community enjoyed a breakast with Santa on Saturday, Dec. 6. There are a lot of people who made this event possible, including: Jennifer and Cliff Hall for chairing this amazing event and office staff – Melanie Allen, Jill Roska, and Deana Lacey for their help. Thank you to Kris Bourdon for all of her assistance in the kitchen. Huge thanks to Ms. Weil and Mark Bonner for the trees on the stage and the décor. Thank you to Mr. Dozet for working way past First Friday so that they could prepare the room for Santa. Thanks also to high school volunteers and to parent volunteers – Michelle Easley, Beth Hatch, Julie Haubeck, Yvonne Jordan, Marii Kobayakawa, JP Maldonado, Laura McHugh, Mike MeCey, Tanja MeCey, Alison Ramirez, Jen Scott, Duste Sellas, Cory Smith, Wolfgang Smith, Corky Younger and to Ernie Tapia. Thank you to Santa's Elves – Lauren Easley, Katie Jordan, and Ethan McHugh. Most of all, thank you, Santa!

Neighbors discuss favorite Christmas memories at holiday tree lighting event in Carmichael

With Christmas just a few days away, the timing is right to share fond memories of this popular holiday. And at the Holiday Tree Lighting event at Carmichael Park, which included a performance by the River City Concert Band, activities for children, food trucks, a short magic show and photos with Santa Claus on Thursday, Dec. 4, the Arden-Carmichael News found several locals who were willing to share such memories.

Among these people was Steve Kelley, the Scout Master for Troop 55 (which presented the colors for the flag salute earli-er that evening). He shared his most memorable experience as follows: "I would have to say one that really sticks out in my mind a long time ago (was when) I had been out of work, wondering how we were going to get presents to the kids. And, yes, there is a Santa Claus. One night, I hear some noise, I open the door and there is an envelope with money (about a couple hundred dollars) in it. I never have figured out where it came from, so there has to be a Santa Claus."

Shannon Bladow spoke of growing up in El Dorado Hills when the fire department used to come down the streets and the Grinch would follow behind. "Santa and all the elves would give out candy canes and the Grinch would come behind and steal all the kids' candy canes. I lived there for 18 years."

Hearing Shannon tell the story, Brian Bladow interjected, joking: "I would have loved to have been the Grinch."

"That's my husband," Shannon quipped.

Asked if he liked candy, Brian said, "No, I like taking candy from babies."

"He's like the Grinch," Shannon said.

But, on a more serious note, Brian said, "Every year (Christmas) is great. The first years when my kids realized what Christmas was all about -- those are my best memories."

Similarly, Jason Gedney spoke highly of quality family time over the holidays. Growing up, he spent every Christmas Eve at his grandmother's house. "The whole family got together with the cousins. It only happened a handful of times a year, when you got together with all your cousins."

Brett Gadd, who was at the Carmichael tree lighting with his wife Ashlee and two children, said among his most memorable Christmas experiences was just last year in East Sacramento. "Last year, our friends did a hay ride. He hooked a trailer up to his truck and decorated it with lights and we drove around the East Sacramento area, Midtown, looking at people's lights and had big things of hot chocolate and stuff. We do it every year. Our trailer was jam packed. Not another person could fit inside."

River City Concert Band trumpet player Dave Harbert spoke about the joys of Christmas surrounding the traditions of his fami-ly. "Waking up Christmas morning when I was a little kid, finding that Santa had come and all the presents were out. And just that excitement in the morning, especially we had breakfast and we had to wait until breakfast was all done before we could go open the presents. Also, it is fun now as a parent, watching Christmas through their eyes. That's very special."

During the evening's musical program, Keaton Reilly from Congressman Ami Bera's of-fice, thanked the Carmichael Recreation and Park District for throwing an amazing event. "It's really events like this that make California 7th District and Carmichael, in particular, such a great place to live, or for me such a great place to visit. You have not only great food and entertainment, but great people, and I think this shows a sense of community that not all places have and it makes us really lucky."

Similarly, County Supervisor Susan Peters was grateful for the night's event as well as the good weather. "It's amazing we got a rain free event tonight. I knew that all the parks people were probably laying awake, worrying about this. Carmichael Park is the center of activity as it should be. Tonight with the food trucks here, it's an ongoing event that the park district does and it just makes it really festive and draws more people. So we're just really happy you're here. Enjoy it all."

Carmichael magician to perform benefit show on Saturday for La Sierra Community Center

Magician Dale Lorzo will be at the La Sierra Community Center on Saturday, Dec. 13 at 1:30 p.m. It will be a fundraiser for improvement of a new stage among other things. The cost is $10 per person. Call 485-5322 to reserve tickets. From Carmichael, Dale and his wife Elaine travel all over California, performing various types of magic. Professionally, he's been a magician since 1970 starting as a fun hobby as a youth."It was just a fun hobby as a kid. It was just a fun thing to learn to share with other people and add smiles. Seeing their smiles makes it all worthwhile."

Dale has performed various acts, including floating people in the air. The one he said his wife remembers the most is the basket of sweets, which they'll be doing on Saturday. "It's where we have a big basket she goes in. We put sweet treats in the basket with her and big giant candy canes penetrate through her body until she finally disappears."

Sacramento resident hand delivers donated clothing items and more to the homeless

By MONICA STARK editor@valcomnews.com

About eight or nine years ago, Regina King lived on the streets of Sacramento suffering from alcoholism, drug abuse and humiliation. Today, Regina, now a resident of South Land Park, is married to Gina Backovich, has a 17 month old son named Rex and is one semester into completing a masters degree in speech pathology from California State University, Sacramento. What changed from that dark time was the realization of who she wanted to be. Cognizant of resources around her, Regina was driven after a couple months of living on the streets to check into a county rehabilitation program.

But what she experienced while homeless was deep.

"There's something dehumanizing. Either people don't see you or they move away from you or they fear you. And sometimes there's reason for that and often there's not. There's definitely a sense of dehumanization."

That affect on her has been a motivating factor for her efforts over the last few years to put out a call on social media for essential winter items like warm clothing, socks, and toiletries – items that she picks up from people directly and hand delivers them to the homeless she sees during her side-street commute to and from school. By February in years past, she's taken to donating what she hasn't been able to hand deliver to the Sacramento Food Bank and Family Services.

To kick off her homeless supply drive event, she puts out a call on Facebook to her friends and for them to let their friends know she is collecting warm items for the winter. Then she takes it right back out into the community, not anywhere specific. "It's just a matter of walking around Midtown, Downtown and whenever I just see somebody it's just me leaving it with their stuff or asking if they need anything. I keep a stack of blankets."

With a sense of humor, Regina joked when asked more about the process. "There's no organization, whatsoever, none at all. It's like, hey, you have something? I'll put it in my trunk. It's really, really, very basic."

Usually, she parks her car, scopes out the people and then hands them items she thinks they might need. "I try to judge by size and gender and try to figure what they would prefer. Like today, it's been raining and I received a big plastic poncho and I don't even know who I left it with. It was just a person wandering around over near Panera (Bread) on Howe (Avenue) and I saw where she put all her stuff."

Unlike previous years when she's put notice out in October, this year she's just getting started As of the interview with this publication last Thursday, she had only received the aforementioned poncho and two small food packets.

Regina proceeds with the deliveries without judgment, without agenda, except that of having a bit of a human interaction. "To have human interaction and human touch is really a big deal," she said. For that reason, it's important to her to hand deliver items as opposed to donating them to the food bank initially. Further explaining that, she said, "one of the things about homelessness is that people get really turned off by smell or lack of cleanliness and I like to be able to touch people, touch somebody's hand or look into somebody's eyes – just human connectedness; it's incredibly important to me."

Asked about the response from homeless individuals she gets upon delivery, Regina said it has been mixed. Elaborating on her experiences, she said: "I've had a lot of people who are really distrusting and people have gotten really upset with me for coming up to them. But I've gotten to hear a lot of stories of how people got on the streets and I've gotten a lot of people who are silent. It's across the board."

Regina's efforts started in 2009 with one of her friends and has been going strong for nearly four years. "I think when I started it was just a friend who asked me, hey, do you want to help me with this? And then as time has gone on, I've noticed myself complaining about going from my heated house to the rain, to my heated car, into the rain, into the heated building at work or at school and complaining about that. And I'll catch myself doing that. I have more than I could ever need. And I just think so many of us have so much. We go through our closets every year. I've had more jackets than I could ever know what to do with and there's people out there really in need."

Regina, a former volunteer at a residential treatment center for women coming off of drugs and alcohol, used to cook for the residents. The amount of gratitude she witnessed face-toface "was such a big deal and I think I've been searching for that ever since. For the love of humanity, for the love of people. I think we live in a nation where homelessness shouldn't even be an issue, so the fact that it is, breaks my heart and I feel like it's something I can do and there's a lot of things I feel like I am helpless about. And, this, I feel is something."

Local teacher furthering notoriety in the art world through Johnny Cash project

By LANCE ARMSTRONG Lance@valcomnews.com

Editor's Note: This is part one of a two-part series about local artist Adan Romo.

Adan Romo, a longtime teacher at St. Francis High School in East Sacramento, has earned much recognition as a creator of public art. And that notoriety has come through a variety of art projects, including one that is beginning to earn him widespread attention.

His latest project, and one that will become the largest artistic endeavor of his career to date, will be a series of Johnny Cash sculptures in Folsom.

Already, that high profile project, which has not yet been commenced, has drawn the attention of such publications as Rolling Stone magazine, a London-based music magazine known as Uncut, and Yahoo!'s travel research site, Yahoo! Travel.

As an indication of Adan's busy schedule as an artist, while many Americans were relaxing at home or making their way through Black Friday crowds in search of heavily discounted items on the day after Thanksgiving, Adan was being interviewed by journalists eager to hear his story.

Adan's first interview of the day was with the aforementioned Uncut magazine, and then shortly after that interview was completed, he had a meeting with the East Sacramento News.

During his interview with this publication, Adan spoke about his co-operation of an art business and his acquisition of the Johnny Cash-related art project.

"I have my own company with my father (Jesus Romo)," Adan said. "It's called Romo Studios and we've been doing public artwork now for almost 20 years now. (The business's projects include) public artwork for churches or communities or schools or monuments. And so, the opportunity came up last year for the (Cash project).

"The city of Folsom put out a call to artists to create concepts for a new project they have there, which is to create a three-mile long trail near Folsom Prison that connects all their other existing trails. And they chose to call that three-mile portion the Johnny Cash Trail.

"Then they wanted to select six different artists to create six different artworks along that trail to celebrate Johnny Cash."

After pitching his ideas for each of the six artworks, Adan was informed that he was selected to create all of the art for the project. To have his business presented with the opportunity to create all of these works of art was certainly more than Adan had envisioned.

Adan, who will be assisted with the project by his father, spoke at length about the project that will consume many hours of his life for about five consecutive years.

"It's an exciting project," Adan said. "It was a national competition and to get all six (artwork creation opportunities) was great. I got the call, probably last spring that I had won all the sites. And then I spent the summer fine tuning my concepts and creating (threedimensional) models of the concepts.

"(Adan presented those concepts) to the original panel that selected me to kind of make sure that everything was tight and all the details were dealt with and questions were dealt with, and it navigated to the city council and all the city entities that a project like this has to move through (in) Folsom. And then last, the Johnny Cash family has to overlook it and make sure everything works within their interests. And then by next spring we should probably be actually getting started on the project.

"They're six completely different artworks from a figurative sculpture of Johnny Cash to one that is a sculpture that looks like a ring of fire from a distance the way it's lit. But each individual flame is a guitar pick that's welded together, so there's a ring of guitar picks that looks like a ring of fire from a distance to evoke his song, 'Ring of Fire.' That will sit on top of one of the hills. That will be about 15 feet tall.

"There's another work that's a series of laser cut poles that stand individually. All the poles sit together, but as you walk around the poles at one point, the way that the poles are cut, Johnny Cash's image emerges from a particular point of view.

"Each work is completely different and diverse. They're all sculpture pieces. The largest one is about 18 feet tall. That's going to be the laser cut poles. And then there's a figurative, realistic bronze sculpture of Johnny Cash that's going to be about 7 feet tall, which is going to be sitting in front of the prison."

Adan mentioned that his father will be creating the latter named sculpture, and he added that his father "brings a lot of technical understanding, engineering to what we do."

And Adan said that like his father, he will also create one of the Johnny Cash sculptures as a solo project.

Sacramento native Adan Romo, shown in his midtown Sacramento studio, is expected to begin working on a sculpture project for the Johnny Cash Trail in Folsom this spring. This major art project is expected to be completed in 2020.

The project will also feature a phone application created for the Johnny Cash Trail, which was opened with a ribbon cutting ceremony that was attended Johnny Cash's eldest daughter, Roseanne Cash, on Oct. 4.

In speaking about that application, Adan said, "I also created a phone app, so that as you go along the trail visiting one art site to the other, different content and music comes up, so the visitor gets to experience some of the life of Johnny Cash and his music as they move through this trail. So, the Cash family in particular really likes that (idea), as well as the city of Folsom. So it's allowing me an opportunity to not only do what I do best, which is create works of art for the public, but also incorporate some technology into it to make the experience even richer for the visitors there."

Adan also spoke about the use of the Johnny Cash name and the Cash family's support of that use for the project.

"The great part of this project is the Johnny Cash name," said Adan, who noted that another one of Johnny Cash's daughter, Cindy Cash, was on the trail artwork selection committee. "He's so well loved. He's got so many fans that there's just been a tremendous amount of interest in the project. So, just being involved and being the lead artist on the project (is an honor).

"It's pretty unique. I mean, the city of Folsom is really the only city that could do something like this to commemorate Johnny Cash, because of his visit to Folsom Prison and because of his music that ties into Folsom. It really is part of the history of Folsom, so it makes sense that they do something like this. And the Cash family (is) usually reluctant to let their (famous relative's) name be used. They're very protective, obviously so, of the name and so they really loved the concept that the city put together and the art concepts that I put together. So, they've been extremely great to work with and it's great to have their support and their encouragement."

Exciting New World of Implant Supported Dentures

•Has the Security Of a Fixed Bridge!

•Easier to Maintain Good Oral Hygiene

There are millions of people in the US who are edentulous (meaning without teeth) who struggle daily with dentures. A majority suffer from discomfort as a result of loose or ill-fitting dentures. Many prosthetic wearers simply withdraw from any type of social engagement as a result of having to wear their dentures.

Lower dentures almost never fit properly. They are loose fitting due to less surface area which can't create a suction, shrinking gum tissue, and bone loss, which can cause irritation in the mouth, sores and pain. The only relief is using sticky dental adhesive to help it, but it is very messy, hard to clean off, and needs multiple applications throughout the day.

Upper dentures are better than lower dentures due to a suction in the upper palate that keeps the denture in place. However, having the palate covered reduces the tastes of foods and the ability to tell the temperature of foods.

Partial Dentures can be a source of discomfort due to lack of supporting teeth or an ill fitting partial. Partials also use clasps to secure to existing teeth which can be noticeable and can put added pressure to the existing tooth.

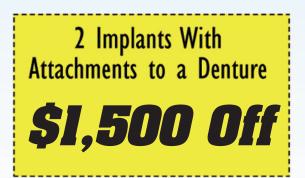

Now there is a solution to these issues: Implants with "Snap On" Dentures!

Whether you are new to dentures or have worn them for years, a snap on denture is a great solution to uncomfortable chewing and slippery painful dentures. There are several types of snap on dentures available, including snap on partials. We make your denture or partial fit and function in harmony with the space available in your mouth, and give custom attention to the delicate fabrication of your snap on denture.

If you already wear a conventional denture or partial denture, we can sometimes use your denture to accommodate the snaps to fit on your new dental implants.

If you are interested in learning more about improving your quality of life with an implant retained snap on denture or partial, please contact us for a FREE CONSULTATION today!
