Designer produces "Before & After – Lose the lawn to create a drought tolerant landscape" DVD to inspire sustainable—but still stunning—gardens

By DELL RICHARDS Special to the Arden-Carmichael News

With water shortages still a concern and water limits in many cities, Arden landscape designer Roberta Walker has produced a DVD that walks people through the design process to lose the lawn for a drought-tolerant landscape.

With more than 1,000 garden designs un-der her belt, Walker still believes in creating stunningly beautiful landscapes using plants that tolerate heat with less water.

"A garden is a magical part of who we are," said Walker. "When you create a landscape with more diverse, sustainable plants, you're opening up a conversation between you and nature."

"You can have painting with a lovely palate of plantings year-round-and still be sustainable."

Her third DVD, "Before and After," shows people what choices they'll have in a garden make-over.

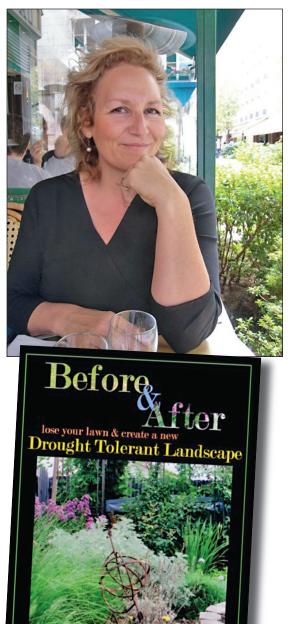

From shape and grade, walkways, walls and water features, patios and kitchens, plants and ground cover, the DVD covers the steps and some of the many choices.

Walker not only talks weed fabric, irritation and lighting, but has gives instructions and has helpful suggestions.

By the end, Walker has people thinking differently about their "square footage". expanding the usable space to create outdoor living areas.

A former graphic designer, art teacher and painter, Walker has produced two other DVDs-- Creating a Drought Tolerant Landscape and Create a Dry Cobble Stream.

Since founding Roberta Walker Landscape Design nearly 20 years ago, Walker's exquisite designs have been featured in Sunset magazine and HGTV's "Gardening by the Yard."

A measure of kindness Arden-area personal chef donates proceeds to women in need

By MONICA STARK editor@valcomnews.com

Never asking for a thing in return, personal chef Sarah Thompson of the Arden area created what she's called a "Kindness Campaign" – free food donated to those in need.

ness Campaign" – free food donated to those in need. More than a year into cooking full time after being laid off from managing a doctor's clinic, Sarah serves about 30 families a week and caters for life's big events; 20 percent of event proceeds gets donated to the kindness campaign. For instance, she catered a memorial last Saturday and was able to feed 15 single moms in need. "It just feels so good," she said.

After being laid off from her comfortably routine medical job, she created her dream job. Promoting Sarah's Kitchen on the East Sac Mom and Friends Facebook page, within the first week, she received 150 positive responses and made 12 shepherd's pies. A business on the quick uptick, two months later, on a whim, she asked the group if anyone needed an extra measure of kindness.

Sarah's first Kindness Campaign began with the following post to the East Sac Mom's group: "If you are suffering from the lack of support from the home, I want to make you a quiche."

"I started giving about 20 percent to the kindness campaign, which at first was 20 percent of nothing," she said.

But then people learned about Sarah's Kitchen and they began associating Sarah Thompson as someone whose business helps others and her efforts have started a ripple effect in the community. People say they are inspired by Sarah Thompson's Kindness Campaign.

"It's really cool to see people want to show kindness in their own way, too," she said.

From serving veterans on the second and fourth Thursdays of the month at the Folsom VFW, to serving cancer patients, single moms and moms suffering from postpartum depression,

Sactown Union Brewery: Cold Beer & Friends

by LEIGH STEPHENS

Dreams do come true! Quinn Gardner and Michael Barker conjured up magic with the opening of their Sactown Union Brewery near Sac State. It's a place "where everybody knows your name;" a relaxing place for a cold beer and budding friendships. It's motto, "Passion is our most important ingredient!"

Customer Jason Kelley says about the new craft brewery, 'Quinn and Michael had a dream and didn't quit. Look at this place; you want to be part of that dream and help it grow."

The brewery had their "soft opening" during Sacra-mento Beer Week in February 2016. They are planning the grand opening this year as they wait for several beers to ferment.

Quinn and Michael are co-owners of the brewerv. Quinn serves as CEO and Michael as Brew Master. Quinn previously worked in sales at a Central Valley large domestic beer distributer. Michael worked at Santa Cruz Ale Works for twenty years before he came to Sacramento. He and Quinn met in Santa Cruz before partnering in bringing Sactown Union to our community. award-winning (four gold medals)#Kolsch (Koln-style Michael says "Our ultimate goal is to bring national recognition to our products. We are ahead of production, Ale), Nitro Noctem (Oat-and our goal this year is 1,000 barrels. Next year it's 2,000. Our next step is to get cans to the retailers. We want to be the prime craft brew in Sacramento.

When I was a firefighter I developed a love for craft beer, but my interest was ignited because my grandfa-ther brewed beer. When I was 16-years-old, my friend and I convinced his mother to let us make a batch of beer in the bathtub. I have to admit it wasn't very good."

Available brews are Ale), Carpe Noctem (Coffee Oatmeal Stout), Centennial Falcon (West Coast Pale meal Stout), Risen City (Double IPA), Something Wicked IPA, The Catalyst (Sacramento Common), First Responder (Helles Lager), and Jeff's Hefe (Bavarian Hefeweizen).

The price of beers range from $5.50-$6.50, with tasters at $2.-$3. Larger quantities such as crowlers and growlers can be purchased to take off site.

The brewery is open on Wednesdays and Thurs-days 4 p.m.-10 p.m., Fridays 2 p.m.-midnight, Saturdays noon-midnight, and Sundays noon-8 p.m. They are closed on Mondays and Tuesdays.

Each evening the brewery is open, a different food truck is invited. Customers have a relaxing eating area in front where trucks such as Cali Love, Burgess Brothers, North Border Taco, Arlington Brothers and others set up their trucks and offer yummy foods such as bar-b-qued ribs, burgers, chicken, tacos, and Asian grill specialties.

Community activism is very important to the owners and staff. In addition to promoting the craft beer culture, the brewery supports: education, environmental sustainability and protection; veterans, police and firefighters; research for Cancer, Alzheimer's and AIDS; and shelters and food for the homeless (both twolegged and four-legged). The business supports the Sacramento Food Bank and the Firefighters' Burn Institute among other community groups.

Ön each September 11, the brewery plans to offer 50-cent beers to military, police, firefighters, and EMT's. Community charities are invited to hold their non-profit fundraisers at the site.

The brewery plans to book local artists monthly to display their art in the tasting room. A community music get-together is also planned to start once a month in August. Bring your guitars, fiddles and whatever.

Peter Wisham is one of the brewery part-time staff of 12. Peter's interest in beer began when he started making home brew. He eventually took the Beer Judge Certification Program and now represents Sactown Union Brewery at the State Fair and at festivals and fairs over Northern California. He recently worked the Make a Wish Foundation Gala and Brew for a Cure (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation).

He says of his work, "Being able to work for a brewery with such passion for the community is a joy and an honor."

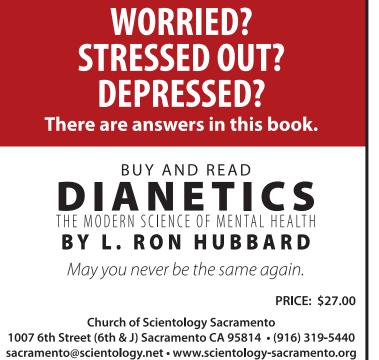

An exuberant Britany Eason after attending a special event for Barley's An-gels said, "The Sactown staff has a wealth of knowledge in beer, brewing, and the history of beer and is eager to share information with customers. The beer is delicious and some of the best craft beer in the area."

In Mesopotamia, early evidence of beer is a 3,900-year-old Sumerian poem honoring Ninkasi, the patron goddess of brewing, which contains the oldest surviving beer recipe, describing the production of beer from barley.

Sactown's The Catalyst originated from a recipe the owners found in the Sacramento history archives. This comes from the Union Brewery that existed in the 1800's, therefore honoring the city history with the Sactown Union Brewery name.

The brewery is located near CSUS at 1210 66th St., Unit B. in East Sacramento. For information on events call 916-272-4472 or contact them online info@ sactownunion.com for sales or event planning questions.

Local family in need of help from the community

By MONICA STARK editor@valcomnews.com

Once they realized they couldn't conceive on their own, Sacramento's Kathy Hedicke and Ron Busselen adopted Tyler, now 29, and Austin, 24, at birth. They are biological brothers. Tyler was born with cerebral palsy and Tyler has had his share of doctors' visits and physical therapy and those bills have continued to mount. Kathy owned and operated a Śacramento based public relations and advertising company for over 20 years until 1999 when she closed her business upon doctor's recommendations and went on disability due to a diagnoses of Lupus in her 20's that was beginning to progress. Ron is a Sacramento commercial photographer. The powerhouse couple have helped the community through their generosity with others now need your help as they fear losing their house which is tentatively set for auction on Aug. 25.

Ron's doing his best to care for them but that has meant he hasn't been able to put as much time into his photography business, suffering from a mini stroke himself in recent years that was a setback to the family needs as well as the needs of his business.

Austin has found minimum wage work to help support the family and dropped out of college after completing two years and receiving his AA degree from Sacramento City College. They had to use the rest of his college fund toward expenses. The family has sold

The family has sold off most of their personal heirlooms to meet dayto-day living expenses and have been negotiating with their mortgage holder for a loan modification.

When the original mortgage loan was sold, the new mortgage holder has been less than accommodating offering them several opportunities and then reneged on their offers continually putting the family in a constant state of flux and uncertainty and anxiety.

Ultimately, they may lose their home, all of its equity and the handicap accessibility that Tyler needs to survive (and can't be duplicated in another living environment). Several years ago the family remolded their home to make it more handicapped assessable for Tyler and for them as they aged. "We put in two ramps and a bathroom and shower that I could drive my wheelchair in and helps with less heavy lifting and transferring me from my wheelchair to a shower chair. It's a big help to both Ron and me," said Tyler.

The family does not qualify for any subsidies; non-profit organizations have been unable to assist them; the Go-FundMe account started by a collection of colleagues and friends has not provided sufficiently for them to sustain daily living.

As a very high profile couple with business credentials and entrepreneurial skills that have put them into the "successful local business leaders" category, Kathy, Ron and family now find themselves in need of financial help and services that they cannot qualify for traditionally.

"We have some amazing friends who have stayed by us, so many of them. A couple of our closest friends passed away, Kathy says and it was very devastating to the family as they had always been there for us."

similar businesses, but our client bases have been different. A number of Ron's old employees have stepped up and helped out. It amazed me," Ron said, adding that some of them he hadn't talked to in 20 years.

Kathy's clients such as folks from organizations like the March of Dimes and Shriners have been people who understand what the family has gone through. "Those clients were really helpful. That those kind of clients would come to me."

Shortly after Tyler's birth, they knew that he was going to have special needs, but they were attached immediately. As Ron puts it: "If you go through a pregnancy and have your own child, you do what you have to do."

And that pretty much sums up their philosophy – one based on their strong love for each other.

Tyler attended Crocker-Riverside Elementary, Sutter Middle School and graduated in the top third of his class from C.K. McClatchy High School in 2006. During Tyler's school days, Kathy says there were definitely ups and downs with some teachers more accommodating than others, but Tyler is very bright and very verbal and learned to adapt.

Also legally blind, Tyler definitely had his share of challenges but his parents spent a lot of money to get him the best physical therapy possible.

"He would stand up for himself," Kathy says. "He did well. He had an aide that became a second mom to both of the boys who helped raised them while Ron and I were working."

In his adulthood, Tyler was appointed by the Governor to a council on developmental disabilities, which he has served on for two years. "He's still doing it. I think he has a lot more to give. We need to get him back in college, which he did for a short period of time and get to a point to get a degree and help more people. He has insight. He has perspective. And very willing to share the frustrations and what is going on with that," Ron says. "(Tyler) goes to meetings to talk about funding for other programs. He also councils other parents with disabled children," Austin said.

Driving an electric wheelchair, Tyler has gone off the curb and has had a few mishaps, but Austin said he's never had a serious accident, like being hit by a car, and is pretty self-reliant most of the time.

He gets on the bus with Paratransit. He goes out with friends, plays golf, skis, water skis.

"He's not afraid of trying for anything. Latest we've heard is he wants to sky dive," Kathy said.

"I told him I wasn't going to go to watch," added Ron.

"He has more bravery and dedication than most people," summed up Austin.

As the family has cared for each other, finances haven't been so forgiving. Trying to raise $35,000 to pay off debts, Ron said with attorney fees, the amount each month keeps creeping up.

'What's happening is we applied for (a loan) modification. If we have that whole amount, that brings us current. That saves our house. If they go through with the modification, they take what we owe, put on back end of the loan ... it's not like any of this is in our hands. With a lender like this we don't know ... and in the last nine months or so with Kathy having to have hip surgery that became infected, and I haven't been able to promote a lot of work. I've been spending most of my time at home taking care of Kathy and Tyler."

The loan situation got so bad, Austin said, "people came trying to buy the house while we were still living in it... they literally had pages for me to sign. I basically told them we are not selling and slammed the door in someone's face."

"A lot of real estate agents live in Land Park and because it's all public record everybody knows ... what's going on. It's been over a year.. year and a half, two years ... We've been struggling with it for a long time. It's been very stressful obviously."

Kathy's best friend, Connie Martin, started a GoFund-Me page, but for Kathy, "going public wasn't easy."

Here are a few steps to follow:

Aerate the soil - Make sure the soil around trees isn't compacted so that air and water can more easily get to the roots. Aerators, which break up the soil, can be rented from a local hardware store.

Set up a watering schedule - Mature trees need one to two deep waterings per month, and deciduous trees, those that lose their leaves in winter, might not need any water at all during the cool winter months. Water throughout the root zone, just watering right near the trunk of a mature tree won't get the water where it needs to be.

Younger trees have tighter root balls that are located near the trunk. They will need to be watered on a more regular basis. As the Water deeply and slowly by using:

a soaker hose,

- a rotating sprinkler set on a low setting, a drip emitter
- a bucket with a small hole drilled in the bottom.

Join the Bucket Brigade -Collect shower water as it warms in a bucket and use it on your trees. Buckets are available for SSWD customers at the administrative office.

Add plenty of mulch -Spreading a three-inch layer of mulch around a tree will help to moderate the temperature of the soil, cut down on weeds and add nutrients. Keep the mulch about 4 inches away from the trunk and spread it out all the way to the drip line.

Sacramento Suburban Water District Asks Customers to Help Reduce Water Use by 10 percent

Sacramento Suburban Water District (SSWD) is asking its customers to keep up the great work this summer and voluntarily reduce their water use by 10 percent and to follow District's recommended watering day schedule.

'Our customers did a fantastic job conserving water during the drought emergency, and reduced water use by nearly 30 percent from June 2015 to February 2016,"" said Greg Bundesen, SSWD Water Conservation Supervisor. "We're now asking them to continue their outstanding efforts by limiting landscape watering during the summer when water use is at its highest."

The District is asking customers who have addresses that end in an even number (0,2,4,6,8) to water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday and those with addresses that end in an odd number (1,3,5,7,9) to run their sprinklers on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Watering is only allowed before noon or after 8 p.m. through the end of September.

SSWD also has many rebates available for its customers to make conserving water even easier. Rebates are available for water-efficient sprinkler heads, drip irrigation systems, pool covers and WaterSense-labeled weather-based irrigation controllers. Weather-based irrigation controllers act like a thermostat for a sprinkler system, and use local weather and landscape conditions to run the sprinklers instead of running according to a preprogrammed schedule.

Customers who install drip irrigation systems and regis-ter their WaterSense-labeled weather-based irrigation controllers with SSWD will not be subject to future watering restrictions. Complete details and rebate applications are available on sswd.org.

Blind Carmichael resident becomes renowned chiropractor

When Dr. Paul Peterson of Carmichael was diagnosed with juvenile macular degeneration at age 6, his optimistic father – a farmer from a small town in Iowa – said, "You may have dim headlights, but you have a good battery. You'll learn enough and be successful enough to hire a chauffeur."

Having grown up on a farm in the Midwest, Peterson learned early on that he could accomplish almost anything since his father fixed and ran everything himself. So when Peterson was unable to read the clock on the wall at school, his father saw it as just one more obstacle to overcome.

His father took him to a local nonprofit that provided him with a rudimentary, primitive reading machine that could magnify text, which helped with school. And at age 11, he took his son to an alternative health care clinic in Dallas, Texas, that recommended he see a chiropractor. He started seeing a chiropractor 30 minutes away, and it not only slowed his vision loss, he no longer had headaches and was never sick.

"After I started seeing the chiropractor, I never missed school anymore," he said. "That got me interested in what this chiropractic stuff was. I thought I would go into math, but then I realized being a chiropractor was just as logical and more fun."

So after obtaining his bachelor's degree at a liberal arts college, he spent four years at Palmer College of Chiropractic. With the help of books on tape and notes from other students, Peterson was a straight A student. Because others were taking notes for him, he could concentrate on the big ideas and then explain them to his fellow students, an activity he credits for the teaching skills he developed. He became a tutor, and eventually the school administration asked him to join the faculty. He graduated and became a renowned chiropractor, not in spite of his vision but because of it.

"Because of my impaired vision, my sense of touch was very keen and gave me an advantage in practice," Peterson said. "One of my patients told me it felt like I was seeing with my fingers and could quickly identify patients' issues."

When he moved to California. he was soon nominated to be a member of the state board of chiropractic examiners, appointed by the governor, and then became the California representative to the national organization. Eventually he was elected to the board of directors for the International Chiropractors Association. He also served on the board of trustees for all three campuses of his chiropractic school for 33 years. He presented at the National Federation of the Blind conference as keynote speaker one year and has served on Society for the Blind's board of directors in Sacramento since 1998.

For 60 years, Society for the Blind has created innovative ways to empower individuals living with low vision or blindness to discover, develop and achieve their full potential. Society for the Blind has grown from a dedicated group of volunteers that included the Lions Clubs of America to a nationally recognized agency and the only comprehensive rehabilitative teaching center that provides services for a 26-county region of northern California. The nonprofit provides low-vision eye care, life and job skills training, mentorship, and access to tools to maintain independence for 6,000 youth, adults and seniors experiencing vision loss each year.

Peterson is passionate about helping people who are blind find employment, especially encouraging young people to go to college, and believes Society for the Blind provides them with those skills.

Legendary KZAP radio station debuted with free-form programming in 1968

By LANCE ARMSTRONG Lance@valcomnews.com

Editor's Note: This is part one in a series about the history of radio station KZAP 98.5 FM. An article about the one-year history of K-ZAP (KZHP) 93.3 FM, a station inspired by KZAP, can be read at www.valcomnews.com.

Nearly a half-century ago, Sacramento area radio listeners were introduced to KZAP 98.5 FM, a station that would become an institution that continues to be reminisced about by many people today.

KZAP, which made its debut on Nov. 8, 1968 and remained on the air for nearly a quarter century, drew a very early following due to its existence as a freeform radio station.

The free-form movement in radio, which was born earlier that decade, presented listeners with a new experience that differed from previous structured radio program formats.

An article in the Dec. 16, 1968 edition of The Sacramento Union describes KZAP's offerings at the time as "65 percent progressive rock and 35 percent casserole – ethnic, folk, jazz, classical and spoken word."

In an interview for the same article, Ed FitzGerald, KZAP's original general manager, commented about the thennew station and pioneering efforts to introduce free-form radio to Sacramento.

"There's been a definite need in Sacramento for a station like ours," he said. "This town is three years behind San Francisco in progressive FM. Plus all the AM rock stations here are strictly formula rock."

KZAP's first music director, Jeff Hughson, who was the third person hired by the station, described the approach to the station at that time.

"We prided ourselves on taking the listener on a journey," he said. "What I always thought of when I was doing it and when I look back and discuss it, I'm always reminded of that (1966 Beatles') lyric that says, 'Turn off your mind, relax and float down stream.' And that's what free-form was."

Inreminiscing about the establishment of KZAP as a free-form station, Hughson said that the "timing was perfect." "It was not just the bands that were coming up – Steppenwolf and Steve Miller and the (Grateful) Dead and (Jefferson) Airplane, Sopwith Camel," he said. "It was that (music), plus koto music – Japanese music – ethnic music, tribal chants, jazz, blues, folk, country, Doc Watson. All that got exposure and it all started selling."

Hughson described the station's free-form programming as being "all about the flow."

"When you do a good segue way, nobody even notices the segue way," he said. "It's like, 'Oh, it's a different song. We listened to that, now we're listening to this.' Seamless, that's what it's all about. And that's where the art came in."

Hughson has the notoriety of having been the only KZAP employee to work for the first Sacramento station to debut on 98.5 FM.

Known as KXRQ, the station made its first official broadcast on Nov. 1, 1959.

Broadcasting from the 13th floor of the 226-foot-tallElksBuildingatthenortheast corner of 11th and J streets, KXRQ originally played classical, semi-classical, operettas, full-length operas, dramatic plays, Broadway musicals and symphonies.

The station, which was owned by Dale Flewelling, a professor at American River Junior College (today's American River College), began its operations with 3,500 watts of power and a schedule of noon to midnight daily.

In addition to Hughson and Flewelling, others associated with KXRQ were Bob Jones, program director, and disc jockey Ken Strawn.

In 1968, KXRQ was replaced by KZAP, which was originally owned by Lee Gahagan and initially operated at the same power wattage as its predecessor.

Hughson said that there is more than one version to the story of the acquisition of the KZAP call letters for the then-new Sacramento station.

And in explaining his own version, he said, "My version of the call letter story is that we're pounding nails," he said. "We're building the station and all call comes in from our Washington, D.C. attorney and (FitzGerald) takes the call and the attorney tells Ed, 'Ed, out of the entire list you submitted, only two call letters are available – KZAP and KPOT."

"(FitzGerald) came in and told us (the KZAP staff), I knew , of course, you wanted KPOT, so that's what I told him, KPOT.' We went, 'No, no, that's so stupid and obvious. KZAP, that's magic. We'll take KZAP.' So, he had to call (the attorney) back and say, 'We want KZAP.''

Among the original staff of KZAP were the aforementioned FitzGerald and Hughson, Paul Merriam, program director, and DJs Fred Gaines, Charlie Weiss and Cary Nosler.

Hughson commented about the original KZAP employees.

"The guys that started KZAP were on the (Sacramento State College/now California State University, Sacramento) radio station, KERS, but I had actually done this all-night jazz show on KXRQ. But we knew music."

It was that knowledge of music by the KZAP staff that was essential to the success of the station, Hughson explained.

"You had to have a broad and deep knowledge of music to pull this off," he said. "If you're knowledge is limited to songs that your friends play at parties, that ain't going to work. You can't just play the hit tracks off of the contemporary albums. You had to have depth and knowledge.

"Everyone who ever got a job at KZAP and other good free-form stations, you had to know your music. You had to know folk, country, rock, jazz, ethnic music, which is now called world music. You had to know all that stuff."

Although the staff of KZAP was very serious about its presentation, Hughson recalled the party atmosphere of the station. He said that listeners were allowed into the studio and that KZAP DJs would accept invitations to parties in the area and show up as sort of "minor celebrities."

Hughson fondly described the KZAP experience during its free-form era as a close-knit, family-like experience.

"It was community, it was family," he said. "That was the great thing about it. Everybody was brothers and sisters. Your audience, your cohorts, your advertisers, bands, we were all single minded. We're creating a new world. We're going to run and populate. And it was just never even questioned. And that went on for two or three years."

Star Trek Beyond

The MPAA has rated this PG-13

Paramount Pictures continues the latest incarnation of Star Trek movies with "Star Trek Beyond" which I will say from the outset is nothing less than sensational in an IMAX 3-D presentation, which I happened to see at the Esquire IMAX Theatre in Sacramento. The presentation was perfect. The cast returns from the last two features; Kirk (Chris Pine), Spock (Zachary Quinto), Uhura (Zoe Saldana), Chekov (the late Anton Yelchin), Leonard "Bones" McCoy (Karl Urban), Sulu (John Cho) and Scotty (Simon Pegg). Pegg, a huge Star Trek fan, cowrote the script with Doug Jung based on the world created by Gene Rodenberry fifty years ago in 1966.

their five year mission to explore the unknown reaches of space for the Federation, Captain Kirk and the to action and the Enterprise crew of the Enterprise feel unsure of what a future in space will be. The picture opens with Kirk awkwardly handling the presentation of a gift to a alien culture, a rare ancient artifact that did not please the aliens, for to them it was a symbol of past battles and death with that culture. Escaping the wrath of his faux pas by Scotty's quick action on the transporter, he beams his way to safety just in time and the artifact is returned to storage within the ship.

Stopping in at the gigantic Starbase Yorktown, almost the size of a small planet, The Enterprise gets some service, whilst Spock learns of the death of a great mentor. Kirk considers being bumped up to a desk job because of the meandering mission of the Enterprise already has him restless. This idyll ends quickly, when a Whilst in the middle of distress call comes in from an unknown ship entering the area of the Starbase. The crew is quickly called in launches to save an alien who is under attack from an unknown aggressor.

It turns out to be a trap, as an entity known as Krall infiltrates the Enterprise and destroys it, sending the decapitated dish of the famous starship to the surface of an unknown planet. Why? He wants that little ancient artifact that is stored on board to complete his domination of the universe, killing all in his path. Krall is played by Idris Elba.

With much of the crew scattered or killed on the planet surface, the team of officers and survivors must reunite and find a way to keep Krall from destroying Yorktown and the rest of the universe. Scotty, alone on the surface encounters a new ally, Jaylah (Sofia Boutella), an alĺbusiness fighter and survivor of a previous Krall attack. She shows him her home, a key to the past of Krall and the future of the Federation which you'll just have to see yourself in the picture to find out just how things will turn out.

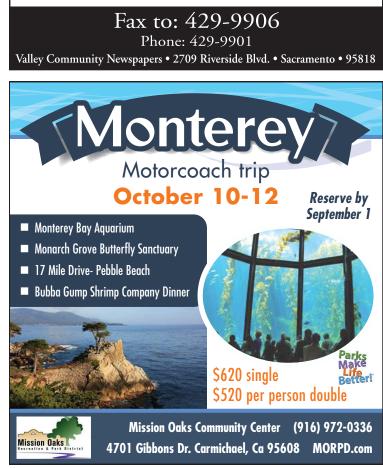

This movie was far better than the last movie. "Beyond" is directed by Justin Lin. There is, of course, the quick cutting and the frequency of too much activity on the screen in the battle sequences to keep track of what's what at times, along with ugly aliens which are standard fare for Sci-Fi these days, but the core relationships of the characters are golden and respectful to the original series. There is a sequence with heavy metal music in the movie which I think may be the best application of that genre in the history of entertainment, but I cannot reveal it here and leave the movie a pleasure to watch.

Star Trek has now been part of our culture for 50 years. As a boy I was fascinated by the original series, but never enjoyed the subsequent TV versions. The feature films, however, have been spectacular for the most part and I may have enjoyed this as much as the first one in which this cast appears. The second one with this cast, not so much. The movie is dedicated to the memory of Leonard Nimoy and following that title card in the credits, the line: "For Anton", in tribute to the brilliant young Anton Yelchin who died so tragically recently. This may be in theaters everywhere, but the IMAX 3-D experience is the way you MUST see this picture. You'll applaud as I did.

Kitchen:

Sarah's heart grows as she helps lessen suffering experienced by folks in the East Sac Moms and Friends group.

A self- trained chef, Sarah has always enjoyed cooking for crowds. Having entertained huge numbers of folks at her family's cabin, she never thought too much about it. And now, she cooks for roughly 300 people a week.

A mother of a 3-year-old daughter named Grace, Sarah said she suffered horribly from post-partum depression and alienated everyone in her life that she cared about. But being part of the East Sac Moms and Friends group helped her be a part of something again. "And I felt like there were so many

"And I felt like there were so many people having such a hard time; I thought I can make a quiche. Another thing that happened I was having a real hard time in my life. And I talked about it on the mom's page, and that was recently. (Someone) said she was going through something similar and then someone brought her one of my quiches."

"So there's always something to be done. Whatever you do in this life, there's no way to express what happens when you do something without any hope or expectation of repayment. If you do it for the joy for somebody else, there's magic in that." As Princess Diana once said, "Carry out a random act of kindness, with no expectation of reward, safe in the knowledge that one day someone might do the same for you."

Without expectation, eventually when they can, the spirit of mothers is to pay it forward. But, Sarah doesn't want people to feel like they have to. "I want them to feel like it's just for them. Just for them to have a break. And enjoy it."

"The amount of things people are expected to do and what they are able to do is different. We're learning to create a sense of community to nurture it. It's not out of this country. We can do this. We can create the support system."

Sarah says she has a lot of kindness campaigns, and she just listens. It doesn't matter what the person's problems are. They could be financial, or not. Her first Kindness Campaign lives on 41st Street but she really needed that extra kindness. "The Kindness Campaign doesn't discriminate for any reason."

Sarah hopes the Kindness Campaign and Sarah's Kitchen can one day be separate entities as her goal is to have the former become a legitimate nonprofit organization. Additionally, she would like to get away from the weekly menu and acquire more monthly subscribers.

Packaging states that its contents are made with love in Sarah's Kitch-
