"Bombs Over Bikini," by Connie Goldsmith who writes the California Kids columns, The Book Report and Note From the Nurse, has won the Crystal Kite award for California and Hawaii, an award voted on by her peers in children's literature. It tells the story of the U.S. nuclear testing program in the Marshall Islands after WWII and how it adversely affected the culture of several of its atolls. The history of the Pacific Islanders is all too-often overlooked in schools. Visit www.bombsoverbikini.com to see a trailer and to obtain the teachers' guide.

What are Head Lice?

Adult head lice are sesame seed-sized insects which are tan or whitish in color. Females live closest to the scalp. It is not unusual for eggs to be camouflaged to match the child's hair rupted, infestation can become severe.

Lice inject small amounts of saliva into from scratching. the scalp. The saliva has an anticoagulation effect (similar to that of mosquitoes) which what to do next. While medicatemperatures much lower than human body tions used against head lice are approved by the temperature.

Head Lice Update

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) issued an update on head lice in the journal Pediatrics in May. Head lice are often discovered at school. Teachers and nurses may perform periodic inspections of students' heads looking for lice, even though head-screening programs are not cost-effective and do little to prevent head lice, according to the AAP. If lice are found, the child

Not necessary, says AAP. The child should persistent critters in our children's hair, remain in school, but must avoid direct head conoften more than once. Head lice are not a sign tact with other students. In fact, the AAP says no of poor hygiene. They are not a health hazard, child should miss school because of head lice or nor do they spread disease. Yet there is often nits. Schools should consider seeking the advice stigma associated with head lice, resulting in of pediatricians when setting policies that may be children being unnecessarily ostracized from ineffective and possibly violate a child's civil rights. And schools must protect the child's dignity and maintain confidentiality.

Prevention and Treatment

The AAP says it's unlikely that we can prevent for a month and lay up to ten eggs each day. all cases of head lice. Children often have head-They glue each egg to the base of the hairs to-head contact, a common way to spread lice. Parents should also urge children not to share personal items such as combs, brushes, and color. Eggs hatch in about a week and young hats. parents must carefully read the instructions to ensure proper application of the product.

People may wish to use alternative or natural products instead. These products are not approved by the FDA. While some plant-based products may be effective, others may cause allergic reactions in children. Agents such as mayonnaise and oils are sometimes applied to 'suffocate' the lice, but have not been studied for effectiveness. Gasoline or kerosene must never be used on a child's head. Manual removal with nit combs may be effective, although time-consuming.

What next? If one family member has head lice, all family members must be checked. Bedding and hair care items should be cleaned. Furniture and rugs may be vacuumed. As head lice cannot live more than 48 hours without feeding, repetitive, exhaustive household cleaning is seldom needed, according to the AAP. Items that cannot be washed can be sealed in plastic for two weeks

- long enough for any eggs to hatch and die. Common myths about head lice include:

Pets can spread head lice. According to the CDC, head lice do not live on pets and have no role in their spread.

Lice can jump from person to person. Not true. Head lice do not jump nor fly.

The best way to get rid of head lice is to shave the child's head. Not true. Medications are the best way to get rid of them.

Head lice have been around for a thousand years, but these lowly insects may not deserve their bad reputation!

HAVE FUN COLORING!

MAKE IT YOURSELF!

Window Stars

hese window stars will brighten up your view for your Fourth of July party. And don't just hang them on windows - tie them up in doorways, on balconies, porches, and the garden.

You will need:

Blue, red and white paper or card, blue, red and white ribbon, sticky tape

You will need to:

Cut stars from the paper. Cut lengths of ribbon. You can cut them all the same length or vary them. Try cutting the ribbons so they form an arch. Tape each length of ribbon to a star and the other end of the ribbon to your window frame.

Statue of Liberty Torch (

ake a Statue of Liberty torch with your kids and dress up for Fourth of July this year. All you need is some kitchen foil and a cardboard tube, and some imagination.

You will need:

Kitchen foil, cardboard tube (foil inner), sticky tape, silver card

You will need to:

Wrap the tube in foil and set aside. Take a piece of foil about 10 inches long and 3 inches wide and roll it tight, twisting to secure any loose edges. Coil into a spiral and glue to the top edge of the silver card, as shown in the photo. Repeat.

Tape the silver card into a band. Place the cardboard tube through the middle. Fold the thin rectangles in and tape them in a circle around the tube. Crumple a piece of foil into a rough circle and tape to the top of the torch to be the flame.

Sparkly Pen Topper

his sparkly pencil topper is a quick and easy craft for kids, and a perfect craft for the Fourth of July.

You will need:

A pencil, sparkly pipe cleaners (chenille stems), PVA / white glue, star sequins or a star punch and sparkly paper

You will need to:

Dip the end of the pencil in the glue. Lay two pipe cleaners side by side. Put the end of the pencil onto the center of the pipe cleaners and then twist the pipe cleaners around the pencil. Leave to dry. Bend the pipe cleaners so they stick out from the end of the pencil. Punch out lots of paper stars (or use sequins) and, putting a dab of glue on the back of each, glue them along the pipe cleaners.

Statue of Liberty Crown

The Statue of Liberty Crown is perfect for your Fourth of July picnic or parade. Team it with the torch craft and your kids will have a perfect dressing up outfit for Independence Dav!

You will need:

Kitchen foil, black pen, sticky tape

You will need to:

Unwrap a piece of kitchen foil from the roll (whatever size you have to hand) until you have a width of foil long enough to go around your head, with a little spare for an overlap. Lay the foil in front of you. Fold down the top to make a band about three inches wide (this will become your points). Fold up the bottom to make a band about 1.5 inches wide (this will be your head band). Continue folding up from the bottom until you reach the fold that you made at the top (you may have to be a little creative with your folds to make them meet perfect).

From the top fold cut out 6 triangles and trim any excess. You should be left with a band about 1.5 inches wide with 6 triangles pointing at the top. On the band use the black pen to draw on the arches of the crown. Wrap the crown around your head and tape to secure and fold down the points.

ve never been a person who saw something and said, 'Oh, I could never do that'," says Jill Esbaum. An author of picture book fiction and nonfiction, she prefers to learn how to acquire a new skill rather than shy away from it. And as a child, she approached writing that way, too.

Esbaum recalls a loving childhood in small-town Iowa—a best friend who lived next door, four other Jill Esbaum pals within two blocks, and family camping vacations on a favorite lake. She began writing with two girlfriends from her third or fourth grade class, and the fun they shared reinforced her desire. "[We] stories, and we made up com- major surgery, and reading ics," says Esbaum.

But one day, "some boy" told Esbaum that writing was of writing. She gave herself "weird," and as a result, she the gift of a writing class and buried her passion, which didn't resurface for thirty years.

are no exception. Teeny Tiny Toady takes her back to the lake where her family camped in the summer. As a kid, she collected frogs and toads in a bucket, but as an adult wondered how they might have made their escape.

Elwood Bigfoot draws on Esbaum's love of nature. "[The story] is me imagining what it would be like to be out in the woods alone," she says. "I love being out in the woods."

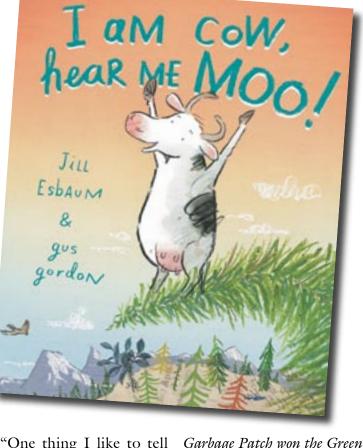

"I think my favorite [book] is always the next one because loved to write and illustrate poem she wrote for her father. you haven't vet heard what any reviewers think of it," she says. "It's exciting to have a new one ready to enter the world."

Esbaum says one of the big misconceptions about writing for children "is that it's easy bement four years. "I told myself cause it's not as important" as out of it." writing for adults. However, she believes writing for chilthat I read as a kid, not the books I read as an adult."

Inspiration can come from anywhere and strike at any moment, according to Esbaum. Yet, her writing process differs for fiction and nonfiction. Characters and plot ideas for fictional stories come while driving or folding laundry, but nonfiction requires more time at her desk researching her topic. "[And] I have to keep track of [my sources] because my editors at National Geographic require that I turn [them] in," she says.

As a picture book author, Esbaum has to be sure her words suggest possible images for an illustrator. During the revision process, she sometimes has to clarify her vision of the story. "Ít's a matter of where [editors] aren't seeing the same mental picture I am," she says.

Esbaum strives to entertain both children and their parents with her books. When she was a child, she used books as an escape from the real world and hopes that her books can do the same for her young readers.

Cats and More Cats

By Connie Goldsmith

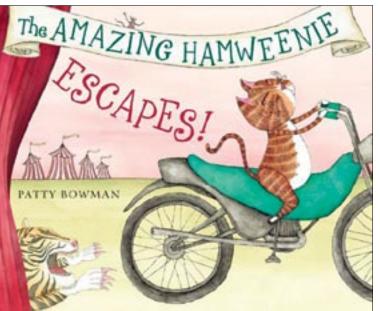

illions of cats live with loving American families. Cats are like potato chips: it's hard to stop at just one! The warmth of an affectionate cat is a treasure to cherish. And nothing calms jittery nerves as well as the purr of a kitty on your lap. Take a look at some new offerings: mummy cat, spotted cat; poetic cat, showoff cat. And tooth fairy cat (really)!

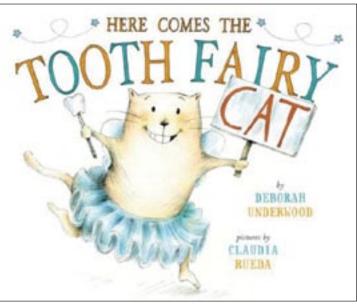

"Mummy Cat," by Marcus Ewert, illustrated by Lisa Brown. (Clarion Books). "Deep within this maze of stone, a creature wakes up, all alone." This outstanding book tells of a mummified cat buried long ago inside a pyramid with his beloved Queen Hat-shup-set of Egypt. Once each century Mummy Cat rises from his tomb and roams the halls in search of her. Be sure to study the magnificent Egyptian art and hieroglyphs that line the hallway walls; they show a story within a story of how Mummy Cat and his Queen came to be entombed. By turns sad, spooky, and hopeful, this multilayered story is unique, beautifully told and illustrated. It is sure to appeal to cat-lovers and budding Egyptologists alike. Excellent end notes describe mummies, the worship of cats and queens, and hieroglyphs.  Reviewer's pick of the month

GENERAL ADMISSION

39 Trillion Gallons of Adventure in family-friendly Lake Tahoe

by Carmel L. Mooney

Northern California vacationing families have some wonderful choices for world class destinations, all within a day's drive and South Lake Tahoe, California is one of the best.

When temperatures soar in the Sacramento Valley, families can escape the heat and enjoy North America's largest Alpine Lake, just a couple of scenic hours from the Sacramento Metro area.

We've enjoyed Lake Tahoe as a family for over twenty years, and it was my favorite family vacation spot even when I grew up several hours away in Carmel, decades ago.

Fortunately for families in 2015, Lake Tahoe not only offers the same beauty and activities it has offered for nearly a century, but there are even more choices now. With a little planning, a family can experience this destination that draws visitors from every corner of the globe, and at a reasonable price.

The best South Lake Tahoe hub to enjoy all the fun and excitement is Lake Tahoe Resort Hotel at Heavenly. Literally a few feet from the California/Nevada State Line, this gorgeous, well-appointed, and completely family-friendly property leaves nothing out of the equation.

For families looking for value, Lake Tahoe Resort Hotel offers fabulous Family Break Packages. A few highlights of this great deal include a game board at check-in, a pizza dinner, informational Tahoe DVD, and a fantastic dessert masterpiece made by Chef Salvador Cortez Delgado, called the Mt. Tallac. This is an unforgettable monstrous banana split extraordinaire, consisting of two bananas, nine scoops of ice cream and all the trimmings.

Don't worry about burning off all that sugar and calories because there is enough to do, just within walking distance of the property, to keep you busy and energized for days. Every day after a hearty, hot, and freshly cooked breakfast included with the stay, your clan can venture out to Van Sickle Bi-State Park to hike miles of gorgeous alpine trails. Or you can walk along the street just yards from the hotel and enjoy wonderful boutiques, gift stores, souvenir shops, theater, and eateries.

Every guest of Lake Tahoe Resort Hotel gets a pass for the duration of their stay, to a wonderful private beach just minutes away, with grill, swimming beach, dock, and miles of trails.

Another fantastic option for adventure minded kids is Heavenly's new Summer Day Camp Program. Just a minute or two from the edge of the hotel property awaits a real adventure where kids start their day with a scenic 2.4 mile gondola ride up to the top of Heavenly Mountain Resort, including a stop at the observation deck with panoramic views of Lake Tahoe. At the pinnacle, their day is filled with activities ranging from high ropes challenge courses, team building, hiking, relay games, scavenger hunts, conservation education, rock climbing, and nature crafts.

After an invigorating day on the mountain, back at the newly renovated hotel property you will have access to a lovely pool, spa, fitness center, and Echo Restaurant, where Chef Sal creates delectable offerings on his Adventure Menu, utilizing only the freshest locally sourced ingredients and his wonderful cultural nuances and memories of his childhood to create cuisine that is not only spectacular and delicious but a special memory with meaning. He even offers numerous specialty cocktails for the grown-ups and equally refreshing and delicious non-alcoholic versions for the kids, infused with delicious and local fresh fruits and herbs.

Chef Sal has a special gift in the ability to serve families with passion and joy and the flavors of everything he creates reflect this. However, other team members throughout the property also love to share their passions and hobbies with the guests by suggesting spots, tips, and stories about their favorite Tahoe-area outdoor past times whether it be fly-fishing, mountain biking, water skiing, golf, stand up paddle boarding or rock climbing. Each team member has his or her favorite activity on their name badge which creates a great way to build conversations, break barriers, and foster friendships.

For many years we have become acquainted with the bar tender Anne, who serves up cocktails for the parents and non-alcoholic specialties for the kids in the late afternoon during the nightly cocktail reception hour where complimentary snacks and $2 beverages are offered. It's hard not make friends with the staff, many of whom have been there two decades ter boarding the train in Carson City, family-friendly hospitality wait to welor more.
