Alumni of Lincoln Junior High School sought for 70th reunion

By SUSAN LAIRD

susan@valcomnews.com

Alumni from the winter and summer classes of 1940 at Lincoln Junior High School in Sacramento are sought by the reunion committee so the group can celebrate their 70th reunion.

Some 60 graduates attended the school, according to Herbert Yee, president of the Class of 1940.

"This might be our last reunion," he said. "There are fewer and fewer of us left."

Classmates, spouses and family members are encouraged to attend the festivities, which will be held on Sept. 18. Lunch will be served at the Macau Café in Land Park.

"We are charging only $10 for expenses only," Yee explained. "The lunch will be paid from funds left over from previous reunions."

There will be time to share memories of "Miss Hopley, the school principal for grades one through six, and of Dr. Arthur Poster, who was our principal for the higher grades," Yee said. "For gym, we had Bert Schappell. He was

Local author to lecture on 'Sacramento's Chinatown'

By ART GERMAN
Land Park News writer

Sacramento was known as 'Yee Fow,' which translates to 'second city.'

September 2010 is bound to be a very busy month in the life of long-time Greenhaven/Pocket area resident Lawrence Tom as he begins an intensive local speaking schedule to promote his newly-published book, "Sacramento's Chinatown."

At least eight public library presentations are scheduled for him in September at branches throughout Sacramento County, including talks at the Belle Cooledge library in South Land Park (Sept. 18 at 3 p.m.), and the Robbie Waters branch in the Pocket area (Sept. 23 at 6:30 p.m.). Other dates include Sept. 8 at the McClatchy library in the Midtown area and Sept. 15 at the main library downtown.

The 73-year-old Lawrence Tom wrote the text and assembled the 200-plus photos in his book with his younger brother, Brian Tom, an Oakland-area resident who graduated from UC Berkeley and the UC Davis School of Law. The younger Tom practiced law for 25 years and served as an administrative law judge.

The book marked their second collaboration to compile the story of Chinese immigration to Northern California, which began with the Gold Rush in the mid-19th century. Their first book, "Marysville's Chinatown," was published in 2008.

The Tom brothers were born in Marysville, which in the early gold rush days was an important way-station for Chinese newcomers flocking to the gold fields.

Lawrence Tom moved to Sacramento in 1957, when he enrolled at Sacramento State and emerged with a degree in business administration. He then settled down in the capital, married and raised a family. He spent 40 years in state government, mostly as a career executive with CalTrans, and close to half a century with his family as a Greenhaven resident.

Tom said the early-day immigrants, most of whom

Kevin Johnson speaks to local business leaders on the economy, needed improvements

By BENN HODAPP
Land Park News writer
benn@valcomnews.com

Sacramento Mayor Kevin Johnson visited East Sacramento's Cook Realty and the Rotary Club of East Sacramento last week to address any questions that the citizens had on their minds. At the meetings he fielded questions about tourism, Sacramento's lackluster downtown and the arena proposal among others. The overall theme of both meetings was one of improvement.

On the morning of Tuesday, Aug. 10, he addressed the workers at Cook Realty. Johnson told the realtors to have faith that the uptick in the housing market is coming. But in order to get that much needed improvement in the local economy, Johnson sees a number of things lacking in Sacramento's current state.

"I want to create a strong downtown core," he said. "I look down J, K and L streets and it's embarrassing."

The area leaves a lot to be desired both aesthetically and economically, according to Johnson. He said that in order to improve the downtown area, Sacramento needs to be able to lure big business. He proposed that the way to draw more people to Sacramento is to improve local schools.

Johnson spoke glowingly of the improvements in his childhood neighborhood of Oak Park, using it as an example of an area that has improved its school system. At the Rotary Club meeting on Thursday, he said that this November's school board elections can play a vital role in changing the school situation.

"If we can get the right people (on the school board), we can change everything," he said.

According to Johnson, Sacramento will never shed its "cow town" label until these things are fixed. He wants Sacramento to become a "destination city" rather than just the halfway point between San Francisco and Lake Tahoe.

"Other major cities are 5-10 years ahead of us right now," he said. "Sure, we have a good quality of life and there are a lot of trees and all that, but we are capable of so much more."

He pointed to Downtown Plaza being "40 percent vacant" and that there are holes in the ground with nothing going on around them downtown. He believes strongly that a new arena/events complex can and will bring people to the capital city.

ARCO Arena has fallen into disrepair and simply does not have the power to draw big musical acts to Sacramento, according to Johnson. He stated that being the capital of one of the most powerful economies in the world and having the oldest arena in the NBA does not speak well of the city. But he knows that simply building an arena for the sake of building an arena is not the way to go about it.

"If you're going to do it, do it right," Johnson said at the meetings.

He doesn't want the complex to simply be better than ARCO Arena. He wants it to be state of the art.

"We can do big, we can do bold," he said. "It's hard to get people to see that."

The newest plan in place would have the California State Fair move from its home at Cal Expo out to the current ARCO Arena lot in Natomas; Cal Expo would then be sold and developed over several years and the new arena would sit in the railyard land downtown.

The arena, which Johnson is confident can be had in the next three years, would play a vital role in strengthening the downtown area that he calls embarrassing as it stands now.

Putting the arena on city-owned land at the railyard would cut a substantial amount of cost from a land acquisition aspect, and Johnson assured everyone in attendance that the arena will be built with the taxpayers in mind.

Much of both events was spent answering questions from the audience. The "strong mayor" question was raised at each event, which Johnson was more than happy to explain to everyone. He said that the current system of government in Sacramento does not allow the mayor to have any authority. He even referred to himself as a figurehead at one point and as a "glorified council-member" at another.

His main concern is that there is no accountability in the way the city is run now. He said that there is no one to blame for the state of the downtown area because everyone just blames each other without any real accountability.

There are a lot of things wrong with Sacramento as it stands now, but Johnson remains confident that a turnaround is indeed possible. Whether or not Sacramento ever becomes the tourist attraction that San Francisco and Lake Tahoe are, Johnson stands firm in his assertion that we can get much better as a city.

Land Park resident discusses his lifelong passion for art

By LANCE ARMSTRONG
Land Park News writer
lance@valcomnews.com

At the lower right hand corner of a large mural that covers the majority of the exterior wall at the front of Sacramento State University's Lassen Hall is the signature of artist, Ed Rivera. And although this work is his best known local art piece, it represents only a part of the story of this Sacramento artist.

Rivera, who is a Land Park resident and a former Sacramento Police Department officer, has certainly drawn much attention for his mural on this university building, which houses the office of the university registrar, the academic advising and career center, a testing center and other services.

After all, the artwork was painted on the building as the resolution to a controversy, which received much widespread media coverage, including coverage in Mexico.

As the story goes, during a six-month period in 1970, Rivera, who is a native Sacramentan of Mexican descent, had painted a previous mural on panels that were placed on the front, exterior wall of the same building, which then housed the school's library.

In a discussion with The Land Park News, Rivera, 67, recounted his memories of a dreadful time back in 1976, when he found out that the mural, which had been presented as a gift, had been removed from the building.

The missing mural

"Somebody came by and said, 'Ed, you know your mural is not up there any more,'" recalled Rivera, who was a student at Sacramento State during the 1960s. "I said, 'You're kidding.' I went down there (to the Sacramento State building) and it was stark white. They tore the panels down and called that a 'beautification (project)'. We immediately went (to the school) and said, 'Hey, you can't do this. We gave this to the community and the state college as a figure of solidarity, peace and culture. What did you do here?' And then the movement started with Joe Serna, (Rivera and others) and the community rose up and said, 'You can't do that.'"

Fate of 'La Cultura'

The mural, which was named 'La Cultura' ('The Culture') and had been created as a tribute to Mexican culture, had taken months of negotiations and fundraising and the support of the Chicano community to become a reality.

But in just six years, the artwork was removed and disposed of, except for pieces of the mural, which Rivera said had been cut up and given a new life at the school.

"They made shelves out of (parts of) the panels," Rivera said. "I saw my artwork on shelving in different parts of the college."

The protest movement relating to the removal and destruction of the mural led to a September 1976 letter of apology from then-Sacramento State President James Bond.

Two months later, Henry Lopez, executive director of the Sacramento Chicano community organization, Concilio, wrote a letter to Bond demanding that the university finance a new mural, repay the $800 used in community donations that paid for the old mural, produce a public apology from the school and submit a written statement about the university's policy regarding the mural.

Responding to Lopez's letter on Feb. 9, 1977, Bond once again apologized for the removal of the mural and extended an offer to have a new mural paid for by the university.

Rivera said that Bond recommended that the mural be painted inside the building to protect it from the outside elements. But after visiting the building's interior, Rivera rejected this recommendation.

Arrangements were eventually made for Rivera to repaint the mural in a different style on the front of the building. But this time, the mural was painted directly onto the wall.

'Rebirth of the La Cultura'

pleted mural. The event, which celebrated "The Rebirth of the La Cultura," included speakers, music, poetry and folk dancing.

The 96-foot-wide by 24-foot-tall mural, which depicts the Mexican community's American Indian-Spanish heritage, features major symbols of the Mexican culture, including an image of the Aztec ruler, Montezuma, an eagle with a serpent in its beak, the Aztec calendar and an ear of corn.

The mural, which is painted with permanent, water-based acrylics, also includes a pair of frogs moving forward, which Rivera said represents the constantly moving forward and never looking back progression of the Mexican people.

A concise description of the mural is located just inside Lasen Hall.

In 1999, Rivera returned to the campus to provide a touch-up paint job to the then-fading mural and to place a protective finish over the work.

Protected art

Unlike the building's original mural, today's mural is protected, Rivera explained.

"That (current) mural, they cannot take it down for 50 years after I die," Rivera said. "If they're going to take it down, they have to notify the next of kin, which would be my son (John, who was named after Rivera's favorite author, John Steinbeck). So, it's there for a long time."

Rivera added that even 50 years after his passing, negotiations could be made to preserve the mural and have it touched-up with some fresh paint by an assigned artist.

The Sacramento State mural is but one of Rivera's murals that have appeared on public buildings.

Rivera also painted murals for the Washington Neighborhood Center at 400 16th St. and the Legal Aid Society at 920 9th St. in Sacramento and Boalt Hall at the University of California, Berkeley. Unfortunately for Rivera, not all of his murals exist today.

Diverting from the story of his murals, Rivera said that his love for art began at a very young age, as he watched his father, who was a pastry chef, decorate a cake with the image of an eagle.

Fascinated how his father could create something so artistic with his hands, Rivera gained an instant appreciation for art.

This appreciation led to Rivera's study of art at Sacramento High School under the direction of art instructor, John Moore.

After attending Sacramento City College and Sacramento State, Rivera attended the prestigious San Francisco Art Institute for three years. And while at the art institute, he studied under renowned artists such as Richard Diebenkorn, Elmer Bishoff, Nathan Oliveira, James Weeks, Julius Hytovsky and Frank Lobdell.

Although he eventually became a police officer, serving in this position from 1967 to 1996, Rivera never lost his love for art.

To the contrary, this love grew, as Rivera continued to create art and gain recognition in the art world throughout his time with the police department.

Prolific artist

During his time as an artist, Rivera has created hundreds of paintings and although he has painted such art images as local architecture, landscapes and sailing scenes, the majority of his work features pre-Columbian, Aztec and Mayan images.

Explaining his deep connection to this form of art, Rivera said, "I really feel I'm part pre-Columbian, Aztec, Mayan culture."

Additionally, Rivera, who participates in occasional art shows, but said that he otherwise advertises by "word of mouth" only, refers to himself as a "tool of what the Hispanic community is about."

"I'm just a tool," Rivera said. "I just happen to have the talent as a painter. I'm fortunate I can do this. I enjoy painting. It's my life."

Rivera, who credits his mentor, artist Benny Barrios, for showing him not just how to paint, but showing him the life of an artist and what it takes to be an artist, said that he is among a select group of artists.

"There are a few of us (artists), we just don't live art, we breathe art," Rivera said. "Everything is art. We don't see things the way other people see them. We see things in an art view. We see things way, way differently. For me, art is like breathing. You have to breathe. You have to do art."

Almost a lawyer: Fox 40's Jim Crandell reflects on broadcasting career

By NOAH WINN
Arden-Carmichael News photographer

What is your favorite sports moment ever?

"Wow, there is a lot to choose from. The one that sticks out the most is when Hank Aaron was chasing The Babe (715) it was magical."

Your fans send you lots of emails and Twitters. How does it feel to have such loyal fans?

"It really makes you feel good to know that people want to tune in and watch you. It's very humbling, and nice to that people care. I take pride in my work and I love to make people laugh, and make sure they have smile on their face when the broadcast is done."

What was the most bizarre story/memorable story you had to cover?

"It was 1991 and it was me and a camera man, we were covering what looked like to be a hostage situation. It was the Good Guys hostage situation. It was frightening. It was probably the most memorable moment."

You love the city of Sacramento and the city loves you. If you weren't here in Sacramento covering sports, where do you think you would be right now?

"I would probably be in Madison, Wis., practicing law. When I was in school that's what I wanted to do initially, but I got into the radio/television career path and it just stuck."

What do you think about the current arena situation of the Sacramento Kings?

"I stand mildly optimistic. There are a lot of elements that are keeping the Kings here. One of them is Kevin Johnson. He is helping out tremendously. The Kings' intentions are to stay. They don't want to go; they love this city. The Malloofs are businessmen and for businessmen to have patience is excellent, because they could have sold the Kings or taken them to another city a long time ago. A while ago, I told the Malloofs to leave, that nobody is going to get an arena deal done. The Malloofs are holding strong. They love this city and I believe they don't want the Kings to leave. As for the plan itself, I love the rail yard plan. The city would just thrive and business would love it."

Helping younger teens to cope when siblings leave for college

By STEVE DEBENEDETTI-EMANUEL
Land Park News columnist
steve@rivercitycounseling.com

In my last article, I wrote to parents about how they can cope with the feelings that arise when their child leaves for college. In this article, I'm going to focus on how parents can help their younger teens cope when their siblings leave for college.

Several years ago, I counseled "John," a junior in high school. His parents brought him in because he'd left drugs on his bathroom counter and was generally dishonest. They were confused because he'd been a "perfect child" until a few weeks before.

Almost immediately, he became tearful and told me that his older brother "Dan" had just left for college. He'd been blindsided by all sorts of difficult feelings and made poor choices trying to cope. Part of what was difficult was that his parents seemed so caught up in their own feelings that they didn't seem to notice that he was also struggling.

In fairness to his parents, John didn't hang a banner over the front door telling them that he was struggling. Instead, the opposite seemed true. By the time Dan's flight touched down, John had commandeered his brother's bedroom and celebrated by having friends over for an Xbox marathon. However, underneath the bravado was a sad teen. Had his parents anticipated this, they could have done some things prior to Dan's departure.

The effects of upcoming transition can be minimized if teens spend quality time together. Instead of encouraging this, they'd allowed Dan to work all summer and stay most nights at friends' houses. Had they been aware of how much John would miss his brother, they could have encouraged the two of them to hang out more frequently.

Before departure day, it's important to talk with your younger child about what changes to expect and what issues could arise. As the new "oldest child," it's reasonable to expect him/her to be more responsible and take over some of your college-bound teen's responsibilities. At the same time, it's also reasonable to increase privileges. Had this honest dialogue occurred, it's likely that John and his parents would have begun the transition being on the same page and had an easier time adjusting.

When it's time for your teen to head to college, it's helpful for the entire family to "drop him/her off." As John's parents weren't aware of how he was feeling, Dan's father took him to school, while John and his mother stayed home. Had they gone together, John would have been able to see where Dan was living and tour the campus. This could have left him feeling more involved in Dan's experience and helped them stay more connected.

Once home, recognize that your younger teen is going to have strong feelings. Be understanding of what he/she is experiencing, while reminding him/her that certain behaviors are unacceptable. When John's parents realized this, they were more understanding about the choices he had made, while at the same time giving him appropriate consequences. Although John wasn't happy, his behavior improved.

Furthermore, encouraged your younger child to contact his/her older sibling regularly. When they did this, John reacted by getting annoyed, as he didn't want to appear vulnerable by admitting that he missed his brother. However, when he started texting Dan frequently and keeping in touch on Facebook, John admitted to feeling better and being more of a part of what Dan was experiencing.

Although you may face some resistance, also encourage your older teen to come home regularly. Doing so will help keep the family connected (and maybe help with some homesickness.) Although he wasn't always happy to miss socializing with his friends, Dan came home four times during his freshman year, which seemed to help everybody.

When teens leave for college, families are forced to adjust, and difficulties are challenging to avoid. Just as you are likely to be struggling, keep in mind that your younger teen will also be having strong feelings. By remaining aware of this and taking steps, both prior to and after departure day, some of your younger teen's struggles should be minimized.

In my next article in this series, I'm going focus on what parents can do to help families adjust when their teens stay at home, rather than leaving for college.

came from southwestern China centering around Guangdong province and the Hong Kong area, were attracted by stories of gold discoveries, "and like most of those who emigrated to America, were seeking a better life for themselves."

Among the early-day Chinese, Tom said, Sacramento was known as "Yee Fow," which translates to "second city." The "first city" was San Francisco, where the immigrants made their first landfall, he added.

The book also reviews the intensive discrimination that early-day Chinese immigrants encountered when they arrived here, including the enactment of laws in California that barred them having the same legal protections as other newcomers to the U.S. Tom said the anti-Chinese discrimination continued in one form or another until the mid-20th century.

Tom said a number of Chinese organizations are currently working together to establish a Sacramento Yee Fow center as an historical memorial for the days long gone by.

"We hope the book will generate a greater interest from the public in increasing awareness of the history of the Chinese pioneers in California and the Sacramento area," he said.

Tom noted that the original Chinese community along I Street between 2nd and 6th streets was mostly torn down over the years and redeveloped, and that descendants of the original settlers now live throughout the community.

"This book is dedicated to the Chinese of Sacramento," Tom said, "who for over 150 years have turned adversity into opportunities and in the process have succeeded in building better lives for their families and future generations."

The book is profusely illustrated, with many scenes of life in Sacramento during the 19th century, followed by more recent photos depicting the role of Chinese-American soldiers and sailors during 20th and 21st century wars, plus the role of local community leaders in business and politics among descendants of the 19th century Chinese immigrants. Many of the book's photos will be shown as slides during the library presentations.

"Sacramento's Chinatown" was published by Arcadia Publishing, a South Carolina-based firm that specializes in books that expand readers' knowledge of America's people and their places in history.

Sacramento fine arts watercolorists 'Go with the Flow 2010'

By MARC MALONEY
Land Park News writer

More than 200 Sacramento-region watercolorists are expected to enter their paintings in "Go with the Flow 2010," a juried watercolor open exhibition that begins Sept. 7 at the Sacramento Fine Arts Center in Carmichael. The exhibition is presented by the Watercolor Artists of Sacramento Horizons (WASH) and is one of the organization's two major annual exhibitions.

Watercolorist Dale Laitinen will serve as juror for this year's exhibition. A signature member of the National Watercolor Society and Watercolor West, Laitinen is a graduate of Modesto Junior College and San Jose State University who earned a bachelor's degree in art with a painting concentration. He is a past juror for national and regional exhibitions including Watercolor West, the Kentucky Watercolor Society, the Utah Watercolor Society, the Watercolor Society of Oregon, Red River Watermedia Show, Magnum Opus, and many others.

This year's exhibition will be the fourth under the direction of show chairwoman Patty Waggoner, who said she expects to spend at least a week at the Sacramento Fine Arts Center getting everything set up for the show.

"I've learned you need to send the signup sheets out many times and to start contacting sponsors early," she said.

One of the most challenging parts of setting up is the not-nearly-as-ominous-as-it-sounds "hanging day," when volunteers hang works of art entered in the exhibition on the arts center's walls. Overseeing previous exhibitions has given Waggoner a keen eye for the finer details of hanging paintings.

"There's an art to hanging," she said. "You learn to know what looks good together, and to try to not put (works by) the same artist on the same wall."

Waggoner said her favorite part of being associated with the exhibition is seeing artists gain confidence from entering.

"We encourage any artist who wants to enter to do so," she said. "Even if you don't think you're ready yet, you might surprise yourself and get a work in the show. For an artist to have family and friends view their work in a show, that's the end-all and be-all for an artist."

WASH's history dates to 1978, when watercolorists Jan Miskulin and Nancy Haley first discussed the need for a watercolor society. After Miskulin's watercolor class enthusiastically endorsed the idea, the group was formed and began meeting - electing Miskulin as its first president. In 1987, WASH was invited to become a member

'America's Favorite Cowboy' to entertain at circus at Arco Arena Sept. 9-12

By LANCE ARMSTRONG
Land Park News writer
lance@valcomnews.com

The 140th edition of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus is coming to Arco Arena on Sept. 9-12 and among the many features of "The Greatest Show on Earth" will be performances by Andre McClain, who is known in the circus world as "America's Favorite Cowboy."

Those who have never had the opportunity to observe Andre's performances, however, should be advised that Andre is far from a one-dimensional entertainer.

In an exclusive interview with the Land Park News, Andre explained that he is much more than a cowboy performer.

"Of course, I am America's favorite cowboy," Andre said. "I've done a lot of things around the United States as far as the rodeo, going from a kid riding in the rodeo and into performing and being this Roy Rogers-type of guy. Everything I do was self-taught. I do quite a bit of different things. I do trick roping, I do whips, I do fancy gun twirling, action shooting and trick riding. A lot of people out there, a lot of cowboys, a lot of western entertainers; they do one thing or the other. They either do trick roping or they do trick horses or they do country singing. That's what separates me from everybody else. I do a little bit of everything."

When Andre brings his act to Sacramento this September, he will also be bringing many years of experience along with him.

Raised in Kansas City, Mo., Andre is part of the three generations of cowboy history in his family.

When asked when he first rode a horse, Andre responded, "I started riding when I was around four (years old) and I started riding mutton busters – we called it – when I was about seven years old. I was riding small steers, like a kids' rodeo."

Self-motivated

In being very self-motivated, Andre taught himself to twirl a lasso as a child by practicing with his mother's clothesline and water hose.

Remembering these days, Andre said, "It's so funny. I would get spanked almost every other week. But it was still worth it."

Andre, 33, said that he also started riding bucking horses during his youth.

"A friend of my dad had 37 wild mustang horses and I used to go over to his place and help him break mustangs," Andre said. "Back then, you wore them out, then you would get on them and buck them out. That's one thing that always encouraged me to rodeo and ride bucking horses in rodeos."

Andre, who grew up as one of six children, received his first experience competing in a rodeo in the Bill Pickett Invitational Rodeo, America's first all-black touring rodeo, which was founded in 1984 by his father, Lu Vason.

Save a car, ride a horse

So connected was Andre to horses during his youth that he even rode a horse to high school, which even in Kansas City was not something that other students would do.

Chuckling after being asked to discuss this experience, Andre explained that he has fond memories about these times.

"It was great," Andre said. "I rode every day (to Paseo Academy of Performing Arts). Nobody else in the city did this. The ride from my house to school was maybe three miles. I would get up in the morning, have breakfast, clean him up and get him ready for the ride. My day really started at like 4 or 4:30 in the morning. I would ride him to school right down the city streets and tie him to the soccer fields (at the school). And while everybody had their fancy cars or were riding the bus, I would pull up on my horse. One day, I got written up by the gym teacher for my horse using the bathroom in the soccer field. I still have that write-up. It was crazy. I walked in (to the gym teacher's) office and said, 'Come on. You can't be serious.'"

Following his rodeo days, Andre began training trick horses, an activity that would lead to his employment with the circus.

Andre said that he attributes a pair of individuals to his drive to achieve high levels as a cowboy entertainer.

"I watched a guy, named (Nathaniel) 'Rex' Purefoy, out of Kansas City and he had the western duds, the fancy saddles, he did trick roping and whips, gun twirling and all this stuff. I said, 'You know what? That's what I want to do.'" Andre recalled.

Additionally, Andre said that he is extremely thankful to his mentor, Kenneth Barrett, who bought him his first rope, so he could retire his mother's clothesline and water hose.

"(Barrett) was always about me pushing myself and telling me, 'You can be anything you want to be' and 'you can do anything you want to do.' That's what I believe and that's what I try to encourage in people and kids. There's no such thing as I can't and I want people to know that you can always do the things you want to do. You just focus and work hard."

Hard work pays off

And Andre's hard work surely paid off, as he was eventually hired by the circus.

But auditioning for Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, in order to obtain his current position, was not a simple task, Andre explained.

"On my way (from Denver, where he was residing at the time) to audition for Ringling, my truck's trailer broke down (in Oklahoma)," Andre said. "I called my brother and he came over and picked up the horses and took them over to a friend of his. I rented a car and jumped in the car and drove to Austin, (Texas) to audition. I was so embarrassed. I pulled up and I had no horses. All I had was a rope and a whip and a voice."

"I stood in the middle of the ring and I said, 'Ladies and gentlemen, children of all ages, I'm Andre McClain and this is my horse, Jonas.' It was my invisible horse, Jonas. I had no horse. I sat up on him, I did my tricks, I did my singing, everything. They cracked up laughing through the whole thing and as soon as I finished and explained to them what happened, (the circus' producer Kenneth Feld) just came to me, shook my hand and said, 'Hey, if you want this position, you've got it. We'll send a contract to you.'"

Nearly eight years after joining the circus – a move that he refers to as "going from the greatest show on dirt to "The Greatest Show on Earth" – Andre said that he continues to enjoy every one of his 500 days per year working at the circus.

"Oh, it's great (working for the circus)," said Andre, whose involvement with the circus also includes various announcing during the show and working with exotic animals such as camels, llamas and even a Watusi cow. "It's a blast for me. I probably have just as much fun as the audience, so it's a fun time for me. I wouldn't trade this in for anything in the world."

Guests have the opportunity to meet Andre and other circus entertainers at Arco Arena prior to the start of each circus program.

Meet the stars

All-access shows, which will be held one hour prior to show times, allow ticketholders to meet the circus stars, receive autographs, view animal training and see an elephant paint a picture. A sign-up to win the painting at the beginning of the show will also be held during the pre-show event.

Andre personally invites the community to attend this year's circus, which is being referred to as "FUNundrum!"

"This is truly the biggest show that you'll see and I encourage everyone, anybody to come out," Andre said. "It's truly amazing and it's action-packed throughout the show. We're coming to shut Sacramento down. I love the city of Sacramento. The arena there is great and the area that we play in is great. We just plan on coming there, having a great time and having one big party for all the people of Sacramento. And that's what it's going to be."

Powers turns a child's dream into celebrity news

By ELIZABETH VALENTE
Land Park News writer

Lights. Camera. Action. Instead of going to the movies like most 12 year olds, Isabella Powers is walking the red carpet and meeting the stars featured in some of this summer's hottest movies.

The Land Park resident has been busy this summer. Not only is she hosting Isabella's Animal Show on Access Sacramento and a contributing reporter to Kids Corp, a community cable show, she's also reviewing kids movies with host Mark Allen on Mark at the Movies.

Hollywood reporter

But the fun does not stop there. The St. Francis Elementary School student is also hobnobbing with celebrities like George Lopez and Owen Wilson. She met up with the duo at the San Diego movie premiere of Marmaduke back in May.

"I was in a room with both of them and I think they were a little surprised at first to see a young kid come in," said Isabella. "But I broke the ice by mixing it up a bit from what other reporters were doing. I asked questions that kids my age would want to talk about. They had a kick with it and they ended up using my interview on Access Hollywood as well."

Next, Isabella plans to interview Selena Gomez who stars in the kids' movie, Ramona and Beezus, based on the children's novel by Beverly Cleary.

"I really like Selena Gomez, all my friends watch her and the book is something we've all read," Isabella added.

Isabella Powers waits for her opportunity to interview the actors on the set of "Marmaduke." The 12 year old Sacramento resident hosts television programming on Access Sacramento and is experienced with interviewing local, national and international celebrities.

"I tend to ask questions that a kid my age would be interested in... my team helps me to understand the vision of the story that I need to get across to viewers."

Preparation for an interview

Her preparation for interviews starts a few days in advance and is often a "team" effort – with herself, her parents and her friend Mark Allen – to come up with the right questions.

"I tend to ask questions that a kid my age would be interested in and my team helps me to understand the vision of the story that I need to get across to the viewers," she said. "My dad helps me practice interview questions and keeps me calm through all this craziness. Working with him is fun."

"She is fearless," said proud father, Patrick Powers. "Since she was two, she has been in commercials, casted in a movie, she just goes for it."

Isabella credits her father for her "go for it" attitude. For the past 35 years, Patrick Powers has worked with many people in the hospitality industry through his public relations firm.

Learning the basics

"She has seen me in action at work and knows how to talk to people," he said. "Her daycare has been real life. Two years ago, Isabella came to me and said she wanted to have her own TV show, so we took classes at Access Sacramento and learned how to write a script, use a video camera, and edit."

The difficulties of developing "the story" came with some challenges. Editing was a learning experience for Powers. After learning a few simple steps and buying the right type of editing programs, both Powers were on tap to assemble hours of footage into a coherent story.

"We had this mold to create anything we wanted," Powers said.

Premiere Night in Sacramento

All this experience has become useful for Isabella's next upcoming project, "King Me." The 15 minute-length film is about an eleven year old girl who has an obsession with the game of checkers. Isabella stars herself in the documentary, challenging everyone from her dance teacher and banker to Sacramento Mayor Kevin Johnson.

"Mayor Johnson was great. I was interested in telling a story about [then] mayoral candidate Kevin Johnson," said Isabella, who scripted the movie when she was only nine. "After he became Mayor, I reminded him of his promise to play checkers with me, and he did."

The mini-documentary, which took a month to shoot, but hours to edit, will premiere at the Guild Theatre on Oct. 1.

"The Mayor will be there, along with my friends and family. It will be great, my own mini-premiere," said Isabella. "I wanted to make a film that could be compelling to other kids and let them know that anything is possible if they try."

Land Park resident Isabella Powers, right, during a brief intermission at her interview with actor Owen Wilson. Isabella has interviewed Hollywood celebrities and local personalities, including Sacramento Mayor Kevin Johnson.

Life lessons

"I am learning how to show business works, how video and editing works," Isabella said. "I am also learning to accept the word, 'No.' Just because someone may turn me down, I know I will have many more opportunities."

Despite all this young star has accomplished, Isabella has no aspirations to pursue a media career when she grows up (not yet at least). Her dream job is to become a cardiologist.

"I know she's been having fun doing all this, and as a parent, this has been a great bonding experience," said Powers. "As parents, we have to let our kids find their own niche and support them any way we can."

Cleft palate surgeon has heart for outreach, palate for winemaking

By ELIZABETH KALFSBEEK
Land Park News writer

When Craig Senders isn't teaching UC Davis Medical School residents about treating facial birth defects like cleft lips and cleft palates in children, the professor of pediatric otolaryngology (the branch of medicine that specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of ear, nose, throat, and head and neck disorders) participates in hands-on pro bono surgical outreach trips to repair these anomalies in youth worldwide.

In the early 1990s, Senders helped spearhead the birth of the nonprofit organization Face to Face, part of the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, which provides educational and surgical outreaches to children with facial birth defects throughout the world, from Honduras to Russia. While there, the medical team also works with and trains native physicians and nurses.

Senders, who has served as the director of the Cleft and Craniofacial Program at UCD for more than 20 years and is also the director of the residency training program in Otolaryngology, has been involved in the outreach trips for more than a quarter of a century.

"When you practice medicine (in America) it's not pure because it's contaminated by money and insurance and other things that get in the way of helping people," he said. "It hardens you in some ways. But when you go (on an outreach mission), everything is about helping. There is no money or insurance to deal with. You work long hours and everyone pitches in."

Flexibility necessary

Senders takes one two-week trip annually and experiences new challenges in each country. He has worked in places with different electricity, bad lighting, operating rooms with missing equipment, places with no recovery rooms, locations that are less sterile than American standards, and not enough space.

"There are a lot of things that require you to adapt, but it's good to adapt because it makes you a better surgeon overall," he said.

Approximately two thirds of children born with a cleft lip also have a cleft palate. The obvious repercussion is physical.

"We understand that intuitively, but it's a big deal," Senders said. "Food, liquids and air come out of your nose when you don't want them to. (A cleft lip or palate) affects speech, swallowing, teeth, hearing and language development. There are a lot of disadvantages if the condition is left alone, and in a lot of these countries they are."

"Each culture is different in how they treat things," Senders said. "In Russia, if a child is born with a cleft, they are given to a cleft orphanage and taken back by their families when they are fixed."

The Senders family is dedicated to helping to heal children with cleft lips and cleft palates, locally and abroad. UC Davis Medical School Professor Dr. Craig Senders is a past chairman of Face to Face, a nonprofit organization that provides free surgical outreach trips to help youth worldwide. He is also an award-winning boutique winemaker. Left to right, Parker, Karen, Craig and Julia Senders.

In other countries, families will walk miles to treat their children and even sleep on the hospital floor.

Palate for winemaking

Five years ago, the doctor and his wife, Karen, combined their passion to help children with their love of boutique winemaking by selling their handcrafted small-lot Pinot Noir and Cabernet Sauvignon commercially. A portion of the sales goes to benefit children's charities dealing with repairing cleft lip, cleft palate and other craniofacial deformities. The wines received gold, silver and bronze awards at the 2010 California State Fair.

"There's a lot of chemistry that goes into winemaking that comes intuitively to me as a physician," Senders said. "Being an ear, nose and throat specialist helps me better understand what it is about a wine that gives a person their perception of flavor."

Each bottle of Senders wine bridges the family passion to heal children and make exceptional wine, without compromising on either. Information about the wine is available by visiting www.senderswine.com.

WASH: Artists gain confidence by entering juried art show

of the Sacramento Fine Arts Center by Marjorie Long, a past president of WASH.

Miskulin recalled the goals of the early members of WASH.

"We were just a bunch of artists who wanted to get our work out in the community," she said. "We really didn't have a home; we had to get space from about a half-dozen public venues." These accommodating venues included Fidelity Savings, Home Savings, the John

E. Moss building, and Crocker Bank.

Over the years, Miskulin has seen WASH and its members endure various ups and downs. The society's membership, which peaked at around 200 members, has declined of late. One thing that has remained constant has been Miskulin's zeal for art and its creation.

"It's my passion, and I can't ever remember not doing it," she said by telephone from her studio. "At the moment, I'm sitting here in my studio, surrounded by paintings, trying to decide which one to enter" into this year's exhibition.

"Go with the Flow 2010" runs from Sept. 7 to Oct. 2 at the Sacramento Fine Arts Center, 5330-B Gibbons Dr. in Carmichael. Gallery hours are Tuesdays from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. and Wednesdays through Sundays from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. For more information, visit www.sacfinearts.org.

Totally turtles and tortoises

Regional turtle and tortoise aficionados turned out for the annual Turtlerama held on Aug. 21 at the Belle Cooledge Library. Visitors to the event participated in lectures, enjoyed educational displays and met lots of live turtles and tortoises. Owners of these delightful creatures learned how to properly care for their hard- or soft-shelled friends. Those interested in learning more about the Sacramento Turtle and Tortoise Club are encouraged to visit the club's Facebook page.

Janey Way Memories

Swimming at Glen Hall Pool

By MARTY RELLES
Land Park News columnist
marty@valcomnews.com

In the dog days of August, when temperatures topped the century mark, the Janey Way gang sought relief from the searing heat. This was before the days of back yard swimming pools and central air conditioning, and public facilities offered the only real option. So, we jumped on our bikes and trekked two miles to Glen Hall Pool in River Park.

The city of Sacramento built Glen Hall pool on Carlson Drive adjacent to the American River in the early 1960s. It featured a neat brick covered building and a fenced, L-shaped pool. Though the pool had no heating system, summer temperatures warmed it to a crisp 75 degrees. Voilà, it offered the perfect solution to the hot summer sun.

The pool opened at 8 a.m. for swim lessons only, then closed at noon for lunch. It re-opened at 1 p.m. for afternoon swimming. So, at 12:30 p.m., on most days, we hopped on our bikes and began the long journey to the pool. We turned right on M Street, then right again on 56th Street and pedaled over to H Street. There, we stopped at Hoskins Five and Dime to fortify ourselves with nickel candy. After that, we boarded our bikes, and rode out H Street, through the railroad underpass to Carlson Way and headed up Carlson all the way to its end at the levee bordering the American River. That is where the pool stood.

After the long, hot ride there, the pool must have looked like an oasis, with its powder blue colored cement bottom filled with cool, refreshing water. We dismounted our bikes, ran into the lobby, paid our 25 cent admission, changed into our swim attire and headed straight for the water.

The pool featured a 25-yard long swimming section ranging from three feet deep on the low end to five feet deep on the high end. Adjacent to the high end, a diving pool projected out toward the levee. It included two diving boards: a low board and a high board. We did swan dives, summersaults and one and one half gainers from the low board. Off the high board, we did can openers and cannon balls. There, the splash was the thing. When you did a can opener, you jumped straight out, leaned slightly back and held your knee up to your chest with both arms. When your feet hit with water, you waited for it to careen off your back and thrust into the air. A good dive yielded a splash which rose well above the high board. A successful can opener impressed your friends and drew "ahhs" from all bystanders.

In the swim pool, we played such games as tag, hide and seek and Marco Polo. We spent most of the three hour swim session in the refreshing water, taking breaks only to sun ourselves on the cement deck or buy ten cent Cokes from the refreshment stand. By 4 p.m., we were refreshed and ready for the long trip back home – which included a stop at the malt shop on Carlson Way for a slush – a syrupy shaved ice concoction which came in flavors like cherry, lime and root beer. When we finished our slush, we jumped on our bikes and completed the long ride home.

Summers on Janey Way were long and care free, and our afternoon swims at Glen Hall Pool offered the perfect solution to the hot summer temperatures. The great times we had there are just another happy Janey Way memory.
