"The Wizard" Makes Science Cool

By LEIGH STEPHENS

"In school when the day came for science class, a creeping dread overcame me: staring out the classroom window daydreaming about the Friday night dance as the teacher explained air pressure and velocity (whatever that is); my nerdy lab mate and me cutting up smelly frogs; washing out test tubes of toxic potions, convinced I would die early of chemical weapons of mass destruction."

If science classes were just a little more like the exuberant programs of the "The Science Wizard," our country might not have a shortage of scientists who could explain the world around us.

Former Pocket Bistro owner bids farewell Brocket BISTROGO

By LANCE ARMSTRONG

Nearly eight months have passed since Edmund and Jade Abay shut the doors of their popular restaurant, Pocket Bistro, with plans to reopen in a new location.

But since that announcement the owners of the eatery no longer have a plan to bring back their eatery, which had nearly a five-year run at 6401 Riverside Blvd.

Last week, Edmund, 47, met with the Pocket News to make that announcement

"I was always there (at Pocket Bistro)," he said. "(Customers) would see me, but when they would see me. I wasn't with my family. The restaurant becomes your family. You're in and out and you breathe, sleep, eat (the business), and you lose focus on what is most important – your wife and your children."

Edmund said that he welcomed the opportunity to thank his former customers for their patronage through this publication.

"I've been wanting to thank the community for so long; I just didn't know how," he said. "I was

The death of Florin Mall

Hello, fair readers and true believers. In the last 100 years Earth is no longer area and the downtown area, with its as pretty and is surely becoming one big city. I grew up in South Sac, It will never change back, and so this is my verbal attack, giving you history and information if it is what you lack.

This is a eulogy of the Florin area.
In the 1940s, Highway 99 was known as Stockton Boulevard, and it ran all the way to the town of Stockton. The south area was agricultural land, with very few buildings or "development". In the Florin Road area were places like the 7 Mile House, Fernandez company, and an old folks home. In the 1950s the Southgate Lodge Inn, The Brown Derby, (Later Wally's Tavern) and a lumber yard could be found near Stockton Boulevard.

The 99 freeway was finished in 1960, and neighborhoods sprang up near it like waterfowl to wetlands. Southgate plaza, a shopping center, appears on the scene in 1963. Rapid construction occurred in the early 1960s in the Florin, Bowling Green, and Lindale areas, eventually slowing down in the early Before there was Arden Mall, there was Florin Mall. Located on Florin Road, Sacramento's first mall was built in 1967 and opened its doors that year at 6117 Florin Road. The mall was set up in a simple T shape, with the largest three stores at each end. You had Sears to the west. Weinstocks to the east, and JCPenney's facing north. The following are some of the now vanished stores that were within the mall. ICPenney, Weinstocks, B.Dalton books, Orange Julius, Ups & Downs, Kay Bee toys, Claire's Boutique, Radio Shack, and JW or Jeans West, where cheap pants and slacks could be had. Not to mention the candle shop, card shop, shoe stores, the African Store, and the Collector's store. In later days there was the learning center, a room full of computers mainly used by students.

By the 1980s Sacramento's early retail landscape consisted of the south one-story strip called Downtown Mall, Southgate plaza, which was near suburban living, and places like Mervyn's and GEMCO.

In the '80s Florin road periphery there were businesses such as Toys R Us, Sears, "Monkey" Wards, BEST, Price Club, The State Theatre, The Comic Box, The Good Guys, Consumers. Goodvear Tires. Wells Fargo, Bank of America, Eppie's, and J.J. North. Southgate had Federated, Ross, and another bank. It was a slightly different time in consumerism, with stores across America having a rather generic look to them, right out of a Mr. Bean episode or a Sears catalog. Florin Mall was no exception, walking through its department stores gave a reflection of suburbia. There were many different types of mall stores in the Bee one time. The same few seclustered around them. There was an curity guards could be seen chasing arcade on the east entrance. They had upright cabinets holding games like Ninja Warriors and Ms. Pac-man. Either as an attempt at attracting customers or a small secret of kids in the know, there was an Elevator Action cabinet set to free play, and you could play over and over without quarters at the push of a button. Years later the arcade moved to the first room on the right of the main entrance in front of the mall. This establishment became behind Florin Mall. It was a failed robknown as "Tilt" and with its non working Street Fighter games, reflected that the arcade was a dying phenomenon. Eddie Murphy made several appearances at the mall, one time buying up tons of sunglasses. It's bright in California, you know. There was the shoe store riot where patrons broke glass and ran off with boxes of shoes. My own memory is that of waiting for buses which sometimes never came like the 51 and 54, sitting under the giant erty changed hands again, and a new wasp nests near the top of the baby blue JCPenney's and lamenting over Florin Towne Center.

teenage loves. Years later, the Special Ed kids from nearby schools would come and hang out inside the mall's main entrance, and I would befriend them, amidst the usual stares. One of my friends was the southeast Asian kid in a wheelchair who they featured after women; every time you visited, you could watch the show.

Gradually the Florin Area fell into a state of urban decay. Two of the three main stores moved out of Florin Mall, leaving only Sears behind. The area became more dangerous, and people lost interest. There was The Good Guys killings in 1991. Four local southeast Asian teens killed six people with guns inside the electronics chain a few yards bery with hostages situation. My high school teacher knew at least one of the teenagers. One day I saw one of the victim's mothers at the door of a friend's house...asking for donations to his trust fund. A tragedy that should have never happened. Slowly, Florin area businesses started moving away, from car dealers to Toys R Us. Buzz Oates bought up most of Florin Mall from the Cordano family. The propopen air center was proposed called Florin Mall's new owner was San Francisco-based South Sac LLC.

Comes 2007. Toys-R-Us is now Levitz, Montgomery Wards is Burlington Coat Factory, BEST is a mosque called Masjid Annur, (the mosque of light) The Comic Box is I believe an East Indian Sari store. Price Club is Shun Fat, a Chinese grocery store chain, and Florin Mall is knocked down and set up to become Sacramento's first Super Walmart. And Sears is undergoing a $2 million renovation. As if the world needs even one more Walmart. Not that there isn't already one a few blocks away from the former Florin Mall at Southgate.

Walmart didn't kill the south area. It had been falling apart for the last 10 years on its own. The significance of Walmart arriving on the scene is that it seals the last nail in the coffin, not only finalizing the transition from what was once a "nice" area to an urban ghetto, but ensuring it will stay that way for years to come. We will see if the rest of "Florin Towne Center" surrounding Walmart becomes a bunch of 99 Cents and Dollar stores like Mack Road. In a commerce-based society, the disappearance of Florin Mall is as evolutionary as a gill being replaced by a lung. But on a human level, it is sad to see it go. It was a lot more fun than Walmart.

Do It Yourself TV

By STEVE LIDDICK

If you have ever wanted to produce your own television show, Access Sacramento offers nearly everyone a chance to do just that. The organization was created to give members of the community an opportunity to put together and air videos that express their opinions, promote cultural and artistic events, and showcase those things that make Sacramento a great place to live.

Located in a sprawling brick building in Sacramento, the complex is filled with the video production equipment, and the studio space it takes for the everyday Sacramento resident to develop a show.

"We provide the technology and training to put their voice into the community," Access Sacramento Executive Director Gary Martin said.

But the genial TV execproducer does not simply walk in off the street and use sensitive, expensive, Membership in the organization and a training period to gain some technical the SCSO plan to cap their landmark 20th season on May 14 at 8 p.m. at the Sacramen to Community Center Theater with a performance featuring 3 contrasting choral orchestral works by Haydn, Vaughan Williams and Dvoràk. But the celebration doesn't end there. The evening will also serve as a huge CD release party as the SCSO plans to unveil its 9th professionally mastered CD -Carmina Burana II - at this year-end performance. Haydn's Harmonimesse will serve as the evening's main musical fare, complemented by Vaughan Williams' An Oxford Elegy, and Dvoràk's Psalm 149 on the first half of the concert. "The Harmoniemesse will bring back so many warm memories as this was the amazing work that we featured during our first self-funded European tour to Munich, Prague, Vienna, and Budapest in 2004," says Conductor Donald Kendrick. Four outstanding soloists and narrator Phillip Rider will join the SCSO Team on stage for this performance."A post concert reception, pro iected supertitle translations, and Don Ken drick's electric and educational pre-concert talk at 7 p.m. will enhance the evening's enjoyment for our concert attendees," added SCSO Board Member Charlene Black. SCSO European Masterworks tickets are $30 - $45 with a 50 percent discount for stu dents. For tickets, call the Sacramento Community Center Box Office at 808-5181 or visit sacramentochoral.com for both tickets and information.

SCSO caps 20th season with Furonean Masterworks and new CD release
